Gov. Landon, Borah to Test N. J. Strength Tomorrow

Republican Organization Pledged to Kansan In Primary.

Hoffman to Fight Hauptmann Record

Roosevelt Not Entered; Attack Is Opened on New Deal.

By Felix Bruner.

As the pre-convention political campaign approaches the home stretch this week, interest will be centered on the New Jersey primary tomorrow, where the issue will be squarely between Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas and Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho.

While neither candidate has formally entered the State, each has a slate of delegates definitely pledged to him, and the issue is clean cut. The New Jersey Republican organization is backing the Kansas Governor.

Naming of a pledged delegation in New Jersey will go far to add to the Governor's rapidly growing advantage over other candidates, actual and potential.

Interest will be added to the primary because of the controversy which has swirled about Gov. Harold G. Hoffman since he began to take a prominent part in the Lindbergh case. Hoffman is a candidate for delegate on the Landon slate. His defeat, observers believe, would end his political career. Former Representative Franklin W. Fort, also a Landon candidate, is actively opposing Hoffman on the Lindbergh issue.

Conventions Slated.

In addition to the New Jersey primary, the week's political schedules include ten Democratic State conventions, three Republican conventions, a Democratic primary Wednesday in the District of Columbia, and the Socialist national convention in Cleveland.

The Democratic primary in New Jersey will give the voters an opportunity to express themselves on only one candidate whose name will appear on the preference ballot, Col. Henry Breckinridge. President Roosevelt did not enter the contest. Nevertheless, he is assured of the State's 32 delegates, as there is no slate of Breckinridge nominators.

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the Republican committee charged "it has become clearly evident in recent weeks that the whole strategy of the Roosevelt managers is to finance their campaign with Federal funds."

"In addition to using Government funds for other political purposes and the attempted coercion of Works Progress Administration workers, to compel them to support Democartic candidates, it has now become apparent that the country is to be flooded with newsreels, pictures, pictographs, magazine articles, news handouts and lectures—all financed with public money," he said.

"Political Propaganda."

"Practically all the money thus used for purely political purposes comes from funds appropriated for public works or relief, and is literally taken from the needy for whom it was intended."

Feltcher listed examples of what he termed political propaganda paid for by the taxpayers, and added:

"This is propaganda and nothing else, and the public is thus paying in taxes for a Democratic publicity campaign of unprecedented magnitude, made possible only by the use of public money filched from the pockets of the poor and paid for by the taxpayer."

Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), Delawar', in a radio talk, answered categorically the recent speech made by President Roosevelt in New York. He charged that the President had made a "deliberate effort to confuse and mislead." He charged that the President in discussing the national income had "made it 33 1-3 per cent more than his own chairman of the Federal Reserve Board states the figures to be."

Hastings challenged the President's statements that high prices increase purchasing power and that cheapening production by improvement of machinery adds to unemployment.

"Not a statement of the President is supported by facts," Hastings said. "I base that statement upon facts as shown by Government records. One does not have to be an economist to discover how little the President knows of the functioning of our industrial system.

"One is not surprised, therefore, that the President should be led astray by such people as Tugwell and other economic quacks. If the President should turn his wrath from the industrial autocrats and clean his own administration of some of these over-privileged theorists and spendthrifts that now surround him, the people of the country would have greater confidence in him and in his Administration.

"If he would turn his attention from the price level, which seems to have hypnotized him, and, instead of harassing industry and giving it an occasional breathing spell, he would sincerely give it the signal to 'go,' he could still, in the remaining months of his administration, make a contribution to American welfare."

Hastings recalled that President Roosevelt had said in his speech that "we are on our way."

"Everybody knows that is true,"

Ex-Gov. Small of Illinois Dies; Was Involved in Fund Scandal

State Forced Ally of Thompson to Return $600,000.

By the United Press.

Kankakee, Ill., May 17.—Former Gov. Len Small, 73, for many years a storm center of Illinois politics, died today at St. Mary's Hospital of an embolism which developed after an operation performed a week ago.

Despite his advanced years Small had been politically active. He sought the Republican nomination for governor in the recent Illinois primary, but was defeated by Wayland C. Brooks.

He was five times a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, was nominated three times and elected to two terms, the first starting in 1921 and the second in 1925. Prior to that he had served as State treasurer.

During Small's initial term he was charged with depositing surplus State money in banks of friends during the time he had been State treasurer and profiting from the interest. Eventually, he was acquitted of criminal charges and re-elected. He ran for a third term, was sponsored in Chicago by Mayor William Hale Thompson and along with the Chicago mayor was defeated in an election which aroused national interest.

Small's first name was Lennington, but he was known universally as "Len." Born at Kankakee June 16, 1862, he was the son of Abram

Dr. Townsend, Caravan Arrive To Plead Cause

Autos and Trucks Escorted Into City, Later Greet Founder at Airport.

A "Townsend Plan" caravan of 18 automobiles and 3 trucks, bearing more than 100 men and women of varying ages, arrived in the Capital yesterday morning, preparatory to the resumption tomorrow of House hearings on the old-age pension proposal.

Later in the day the entire group joined in meeting Dr. Francis E. Townsend, founder of the plan, as he landed at Washington Airport. He will testify tomorrow before the House committee investigating his movement to give $200 a month to all persons over 60.

The caravan, consisting mainly of six-cylinder cars and one of eight cylinders, all flying "Townsend Legion" pennants and American flags, left Los Angeles 13 days ago to bring to Congress a "petition of more than 10,000,000 signatures."

Reaching the District line at 11:30 a. m., yesterday, the caravan was met by a squadron of Metropolitan police which escorted them to the Grant Memorial at the foot of the Capitol where four members of Congress were waiting.

Petition Is Presented.

Lois Jean Johnson, a pretty, 17-year-old brunette, who is leader of the Townsend Youth movement, of San Diego, Calif., presented the petition to Representative John H. Tolan, of California, a Townsend supporter and a member of the House committee investigating the plan. The other three Representatives present were Martin F. Smith, of Washington; Charles Kramer, of California, and Compton I. White, of Idaho.

White also was on hand when Townsend arrived at the airport at 4:30 and posed with him for newsreel cameramen.

"I am very glad that the caravan got through," said Dr. Townsend. "It would have been a grave misfortune if they hadn't."

At a signal from the newsreel cameramen, the crowd of Townsend supporters who surrounded the plane from which he had alighted, gave three cheers. The cheers weren't loud enough to register on the movie reel microphone and three more cheers were ordered.

Ready to Testify.

"I will be very glad to testify before the House Committee and only hope that they don't postpone the hearing again," Dr. Townsend de-

Driver Is Shot As Stolen Auto Injures Officer

Speeding Negro Knocks 2 Policemen Off Motorcycles in Chase.

A Negro in a stolen automobile was critically wounded early yesterday in a dizzy four-mile chase through the streets of the Northeast section during which two policemen narrowly escaped death when they were knocked from their motorcycles by the racing car.

Shortly after 6 a. m., an auto sped by Motorcycle Policemen Harry L. Thompson and E. J. Couture, both of the Traffic Division, at New York avenue and Bladensburg road northeast. The policemen took after the car.

In front of Mount Olivet Cemetery, Couture, who was in the lead, pulled alongside the auto and ordered the driver to stop. The driver swerved into the motorcycle, throwing Couture to the roadway, according to the police report.

Thompson, close behind, narrowly missed striking his partner, who was thrown nearly 100 feet across the road. Couture escaped serious injury.

Thompson said he continued after the fleeing automobile, closing in on it at a 60-mile-an-hour speed. When he pulled along side the Negro again swerved, but Thompson managed to get out of the way and continue the chase, he reported.

The speeding car turned into Oates street northeast. Thompson following too close behind, jammed into it. He was thrown from his motorcycle and the car sped away. Thompson, uninjured, leaped back on his machine and followed.

Turning into an alley in the rear of the 1200 block Holbrook street northeast, the Negro jammed the car sidewise and leaped out.

He started to run across a vacant lot. Thompson fired two shots and the man collapsed. At Casualty Hospital with a bullet wound in his abdomen, the man gave police his name as Henry Jackson, 22, of 1327 Thirteenth street northwest.

Later, investigation proved no such address and Jackson was identified, police said, as David Clark, 19, of Daytona, Fla. He has a long record of robbery and thefts.

Regaining consciousness after an emergency operation, Clark said, according to police, he had stolen the automobile from Roy D. Morris, of 2434 Franklin street northeast.

Couture was picked up by a passing motorist and taken to the hospital. He was treated for severe abrasions on his right side.

Police of 8 States Join Hunt For Mystery Flier After Attack

By the United Press.

New York, May 17.—An eight-State police alarm was sent out today for a mysterious plane and its pilot when the ship took off from Holmes Airport after injuring a policeman who sought to question the flier.

The plane, a two-seater Boeing biplane, was believed to be one sought by United States and Canadian customs officers assigned to catch smugglers.

The ship landed at Holmes Airport this afternoon and taxied to the edge of the field, as if to meet a taxicab just arriving. It was noticed by Patrolman Otto Kafka, formerly a police pilot.

On April 30, an alarm was sent out from St. Albans, Vt., by C. S. Bashaw, U. S. customs inspector, for a plane of the same description. Numbers of the plane wanted by Bashaw and the name of its probable pilot were included in the alarm, which described smuggling activities.

Kafka believed the plane that landed at the airport today was the smuggler ship and started toward it. The plane taxied to the far side of the field when Kafka got close. He chased it and after a game of tag lasting several minutes, reached the side of the ship.

Others at the airport saw Kafka talk to the pilot. Suddenly the plane began to move. The policeman hung to the side of the cockpit as it gathered speed.

As the tail lifted for the take-off, Kafka was flung to the ground. He was cut and bruised, but was not hurt seriously. He said he told the pilot to get out of the ship, but the flier responded by pushing him away and speeding down the runway.

Several pilots who witnessed the incident boarded their planes immediately and took off in pursuit. They returned later and reported the fleeing plane had outdistanced them.

Meantime, a police alarm had been sent out and a police plane from Floyd Bennett Field joined the chase, but too late to do any good.

When the excitement subsided and police looked around for the taxicab that had arrived simultaneously with the mystery plane, it was gone.

School Board 'Gag' Hinted Blanton Aim

Silent on Report He Will Introduce Measure This Week.

Superintendent Could Be Dismissed Without Showing Cause.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, is preparing to introduce in the House of Representatives a bill to change the method of appointing members of the Board of Education and to place them under the control of the District Commissioners, it was reported yesterday.

Asked about the report, that he intended to introduce such a bill this week, making good a threat that he has uttered repeatedly during the raging "little Red rider" controversy, Blanton replied, "I have nothing to say on the matter for the newspapers," and hung up the telephone receiver.

Introduction of such a bill, it is believed, is part of Blanton's strategy to defeat the Sission bill to repeal the rider that is scheduled to be brought up on the House floor next Monday, and indirectly to bring about the ousting of Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou.

Charged With Communism.

That threat of such a law will not deter the board from its fight to repeal the rider and to protect Balolu from the charges of communism that have been leveled against him, was indicated last night by Mrs. Henry G. Doyle, president of the Board of Education.

Citing the storm of protest raised last fall by parents and teachers against the "re-orgnization" act proposed by the Commissioners which also sought to bring the School Board under their sway, Mrs. Doyle predicted the citizens would "repeat their protest against any attempt to put our school system into politics."

At present members of the board serve without salary and are chosen by the judges of the District Supreme Court for terms of three years, each year three members coming up for re-appointment. John Wilson, Henry I. Quinn and Mrs. Philip Sydney Smith are the three members whose re-appointment will be considered before the close of this school term.

Although the text of the bill that Blanton intends to introduce was not available yesterday, it is believed that it will follow the lines suggested by him in an extension of remarks in the Congressional Record of April 14.

"An act would seem to be in order at this time which would abolish the Board of Education," he declared, "such an act might read in substance:

"Section one: That from and after the first of July, 1936, the Board of Education of the District of Columbia shall be abolished and all the powers and duties now conferred upon such board shall be transferred to a new board, to be known as the Board of School Trustees, and to consist of nine members having the same qualifications and terms of office as required for said abolished Board of Education, but to be appointed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Dismissal at Discretion.

"Section two: Said board of school trustees shall have power to remove the superintendent of schools at any time, in its discretion, without any special showing or cause. The board shall also have power to make appointments, promotions, transfers or dismissals of any director, supervising principal, principal, head of department or teacher, or any other subordinate to the superintendent of schools, in accord with its own discretion or judgment, whether in accord with or opposed to a recommendation of the superintendent of schools."

If enacted, such a law would pave the way not only for the removal of Dr. Ballou "without any special showing or cause," but for the dismissal of any school official or teacher at the "discretion or judgment" of the board members.

Whether Blanton intends to introduce the law as a separate bill, pressing for its passage before the adjournment of Congress and running the risk of its being killed in committee, or whether he intends to propose it as an amendment to the Sisson bill when and if it is brought to the floor, is not certain. It is believed the Texan is planning the latter strategy.

If his efforts to block the Sisson bill are unsuccessful, Blanton is expected to move to amend the bill by adding his provisions for abolishing the Board of Education, thus hoping to split the ranks of the red rider opponents and to delay action until the adjournment of Congress.

Glider Pilot Dies, Second Injured

Willow Grove, Pa., May 17 (AP).—Two gliders crashed onto Pitcairn Field within an hour today during a series of flights of the motorless craft, killing one pilot and critically injuring another.

Hundreds of spectators, who turned out for the meet, sponsored by the Soaring Society of Philadelphia, witnessed the smash-ups.

The victims were:

Thomas Condax, 23, Philadelphia glider pilot, killed when his ship lost a wing as he maneuvered 600 feet up and plummeted onto the field.

Paul Sze, 35, Chinese glider enthusiast, and believed to be the first man from his country to qualify in the United States for a pilot's license, who suffered a fractured skull when his craft nose-dived 200 feet and crashed.

Japan Doubts Him

GEN. CHIANG KAI-SHEK.

Japan Doubles Force in China To Fight Reds

Plans Swift Action to End Communist Threat in Peiping Area.

By the United Press.

Tientsin, China (Monday), May 18.—Japanese garrisons in North China have been doubled because of imminent danger that Chinese Communist armies may occupy areas to the northwest of Peiping and threaten the city itself, Japanese military commanders here said today.

Total strength of Japanese forces inside the great wall was said to be "less than 8,000."

Chinese forces opposing the Communist armies—controlled by the Chinese Communist Party which was organized by Soviet Russians while they were advisers to the Kuomintang in 1924-27—were described by the Japanese military as "entirely inadequate to deal with the reds."

Will Suppress Communism.

Japan will not tolerate communism in North China or inner Mongolia, it was said, and will act independently to suppress it if necessary.

It was intimated the Japanese army fears that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and his associates in the central China government at Nanking will make no real effort to crush the reds, who recently were driven from western China to the northern provinces.

Chiang, it was pointed out, has no extensive following in the north and receives virtually no revenue from the districts which the Communists now have occupied. Consequently he does not wish to stand the expense of additional campaigns against them. He already has spent tens of millions of dollars in his anti-Communist wars, which he has waged continually for the past eight years.

Would Need 800,000 Men.

"If we wanted to act against Russia we would have to move in 800,000 men instead of the few regiments we now have," one Japanese officer said.

Foreign observers generally agreed with this assertion. They believe Japan has not the slightest intention of pushing farther into Soviet-controlled outer Mongolia at this time and will do nothing that might place a really grave strain on Russo-Japanese relations. It was anticipated, however, that Japan will continue to consolidate her position in inner Mongolia and will insist on pro-Japanese leaders for the inner Mongol nomads.

Chinese press reports today said Japanese agents were active in Shansi Province, Suiyuan and throughout the vast area of Sinkiang.

Hole Made in Hull Saves 6 in Boat Fire

New York, May 17 (AP).—Coast Guard officials credited Herman Klinkhammer, former Missouri School of Mines football player, with saving his own and six passengers' lives when fire broke out today in the engine room of his 35-foot cruiser Getagoin.

The party was cruising about one mile northeast of Fire Island Coast Guard station in the Great South Bay when the fire started. As flames threatened to destroy the craft, Klinkhammer knocked a hole through the hull, allowing water to flood the engine room.

The cruiser slowly began to sink but Klinkhammer calmed the panic-stricken passengers until a Coast Guard rescue boat raced to the vessel's side from Fire Island. The Getagonin was lashed to the side of the rescue boat and towed to Islit, where Klinkhammer and the passengers were landed.

Crime School Revealed In Budapest Police Raid

Budapest, May 17 (U.P.).—A school for thieves and burglars, under the professorship of Michael Marchik, was revealed to police today when 14 boys, ranging from 10 to 15, confessed that they were students.

Police investigation showed that their teacher was "perfectly qualified" and conscientiously proved his own ability to the students on all possible occasions.

Revolt Feared As Heimwehr Retains Arms

Position of Schuschnigg Cabinet, Meanwhile, Seems Untenable.

By the United Press.

Vienna, May 17.—Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg's private army, the Fascist Heimwehr, will resist any attempt to dissolve or disarm it by force of arms, it was reported tonight.

So far the Heimwehr, in absence of its leader who was stripped of his unofficial dictatorial powers last week in a bloodless coup d'etat engineered by Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, has stanchly defied the government order to disarm.

Meanwhile, the position of the new cabinet, which Schuschnigg formed three days ago and after which he proclaimed himself dictator of Austria, appears untenable.

Whether Schuschnigg, in view of the great difficulties caused by the Heimwehr, will accept the formation of a new cabinet in event this one falls is causing anxiety in Vienna political quarters. If Schuschnigg accepts, he will have two courses of action to solve the crisis, as follows:

1. Abandon his plan to disarm the Heimwehr. This would result in an enormous loss of personal prestige.

2. Carry out his plan with an iron fist at the risk of civil war. Few persons doubt that the Heimwehr is ready to resist dissolution by force.

Military experts believe that the government, which has full support of the official army, would be able to crush the Heimwehr. However, such strife, in which much blood undoubtedly would flow, would seriously impair Austria's position in Europe.

Heimwehr leaders decided yesterday to continue "legal opposition" to the Schuschnigg government, taking orders only from Starhemberg, who is in Rome.

Mandell Sees Il Duce.

Rome, May 17 (AP).—Fritz Mandell, Austrian munitions manufacturer who is a principal financier of the Fascist Heimwehr (home guard) of Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, ousted last week as Vice Chancellor of Austria, is in Rome with Von Starhemberg, it was learned today.

Zeppelin 350 Miles Off Ireland Coast

Aboard the Hindenburg En Route to the United States, May 17 (U.P.).—The Hindenburg was 350 miles southwest of Ireland tonight on its second commercial voyage between the United States and Europe.

She was making between 60 and 65 knots through weather that would be perfect except for gentle headwinds. At the present rate of speed the dirigible should be over New York Tuesday afternoon.

There are 39 passengers this trip, including seven Americans.

The Hindenburg left Frankfort-on-Main early today. This departure, making the start of regular service, was not accompanied by the fanfare that preceded the departure for the first trip to the United States—a crossing that was made in 61½ hours.

Army Plane Crash Kills Capital Flier

Dayton, Ohio, May 17 (AP).—Capt. William L. Scott, jr., of the Engineering School of Wilbur Wright Field, Army air post, was killed today as his plane crashed about 3 miles from the field.

The ship fell on the Charles Seville estate. A groom there said the plane fell from a high altitude, but that Scott made no attempt to "bail out." The plane did not catch fire.

The flier was born in Washington, D. C., December 2, 1898; was graduated from West Point in 1923, and from the Army Air Corps School in Texas in 1934. He recently was promoted to the rank of captain and would have graduated from the engineering school here within a few weeks.

Regime Overthrown

PRESIDENT TEJADA SORZANO.

President Sorzano Quits; Busch Takes Reins, Forms Junta.

Strike of Workers Ends Immediately

By the United Press.

La Paz, Bolivia, May 17.—Lieut. Col. German Busch, acting chief of the army general staff, today assumed the provisional presidency of Bolivia following a swift, bloodless military coup which overthrew President Jose Luis Tejada Sorzano.

Busch immediately formed a dictatorial junta, including representatives of the Republic-Socialist and Left Socialist parties to govern until the next general elections. Members of the junta are Gabriel Gonsalvez, Pedro Zilveti Arce, Enrique Baldivieso and Fernando Campero Alvarez.

The coup was engineered quietly and without bloodshed, after a night during which President Sorzano vainly sought to head off a general strike which was organized yesterday under leadership of the labor federation.

Strike Ends Immediately.

Army leaders walked into the presidential palace at the end of the fruitless negotiations and took control. The strike ended immediately, workers resuming their posts.

So quietly was the revolt managed that few knew of the end of Sorzano's regime until he walked from the government house and issued a statement in which he resigned all authority and passed it over to Gen. Penaranda.

First announcement by the military forces was that the striking workers would receive full government guarantees. Next was a pledge that all national and international treaties and obligations would be fulfilled.

The safety of the deposed president also was promised, and he walked from the government offices without molestation.

Fomented by Veterans.

The strike was fomented by Chaco war veterans, who have been unable to obtain work except in the mines. Their plight was complicated late last week by arrival of the first of 30,000 repatriated war prisoners who had been held in Paraguay since the Chaco war.

On conclusion of the military coup, crowds formed in front of the governmental palace and shouted their approval of the new regime. There was no violence.

That the revolt will have Leftist reactions was immediately apparent in a manifesto issued by Gen. Penaranda, sharply criticizing domination of political affairs by men of wealth who had almost no governmental obligations while "humble people are forced to sacrifice."

This irritating inequality," the manifesto said, "has annulled the sacrifices of thousands killed in the Chaco, causing a vehement desire in the hearts of the people to correct errors in the constitution and organize a new country based on justice, equity and equality."

Formed Superstate.

The statement went on to emphasize that "privileged economic circles have acquired such predominance within the government in past years that they have formed a superstate."

Gen. Penaranda blamed this group for economic depression of the middle classes and workmen, the uncertainty of commerce and industry, and the artificial status of banks, contrasted with the enrichment of speculators during the war.

Inability of the government to face the conflicts of the people, manifest through strikes and distrust, shows that the constitution is "out of date," the manifesto said, and pledged the army to "re-establish order and restore confidence."

"The army will not do this task alone, but will associate all able men," the junta promised.

25 Are Saved, One Drowned As Boat Sinks

Second Is Missing After Fishing Craft Founders in Delaware Bay.

By the Associated Press.

Fortescue, N. J., May 17.—One person drowned, another is missing and more than 25 others were rescued today when the 51-foot fishing boat S. K. Parks sank in 15 feet of water in Delaware Bay, 2 miles from shore.

A. L. Downs, owner of the boat, told police he thought the vessel's hull was punctured by an oyster stake.

The ship was anchored off shore and between 25 and 30 men aboard, most of them from Philadelphia and vicinity, were fishing, when suddenly the craft began to settle. It sank in 20 minutes.

Downs signaled another boat, the Florence, anchored half mile away, for aid. This craft and three others sped to the scene and picked up the survivors, who had donned life preservers, from the water.

Members of the fishing party said they saw one man sink. The drowned man was Robert Owens, Negro deckhand on the Parks, who was found floating in the water after the ship went down.

Ten men were taken aboard the Florence and given emergency treatment by three physicians, who were members of a fishing party which, like the S. K. Parks, had gone out into the bay earlier in the day.

Three other fishing boats the Elsa Riggin, the Weeje and the Paula, participated in the rescues.

An emergency hospital was set up in a shack at the dock, where, after first-aid treatment, many of the men from the Parks were able to leave.

Lepers Kill 7, Flee; Islands Terrorized

Manila, May 17 (AP).—Six lepers terrorized residents of Palawan and small neighboring islands today after killing four fishermen and escaping from their colony at Culion Island by stealing a boat.

The fleeing lepers killed three other persons at Kalumpang, on nearby Aboard Island yesterday and robbed Chinese stores there.

Their flight to Palawan necessitated a sea journey of about 40 miles to the southeast. Culion Island is about 200 miles south and slightly east of Manila. It is roughly 25 miles long and 10 miles wide.

On this island more than 5,000 lepers are segregated in a community made partially self-sustaining by agricultural enterprise. The diseased are not imprisoned, but their movements ordinarily are limited to the segregated area of the island.

Suspect Held in Old Plot To Assassinate Herriot

Paris, May 17 (AP).—Secret police tonight arrested a printer for conspiracy to assassinate former Premier Edourd Herriot in 1932.

The national police have been seeking since then the individual responsible for a plot to derail the train taking the then premier from the capital to Nantes, where he made an address commemorating the 400th anniversary of Brittany's allegiance to France.

Italian Squad Executes Giant, Selassie's Ex-Umbrella Carrier

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, May 17.—A giant former umbrella carrier for Emperor Haile Selassie, said to be the tallest man in Ethiopia, was executed today by an Italian firing squad.

The execution followed a number of others and the expulsion of four journalists from Ethiopia. It was officially stated that the death sentences were solely for murder in the act of pillage and looting.

The newspapermen deported from the country were accused of "anti-Italian activities and espionage." They were George Steer, correspondent for the London Times and the New York Times; Isadore Nenzahi, a representative of the Havas (French) News Agency; Alkeos Angiopolo, a Hearst correspondent, and M. D. Robillard, director of an Ethiopian newspaper. Many others were expected to follow.

The Emperor's former umbrella carrier, Balahu, was condemned by a military tribunal on charges of "espionage and brigandage." Balahu was 7 feet 5 inches in height.

The towering man became at one time a drum major in the Imperial band. The Emperor discovered him in 1934 when he presided over the supreme court, where Balahu was on trial for the murder of a rival in a love affair.

The Emperor was so impressed that he paid himself "blood money" on behalf of Balahu and made him official umbrella carrier.

When the war broke out he transferred him to the imperial band.

By the Associated Press.

With sentiment in the Senate Finance Committee veering back toward stiffer taxes on undistributed corporation profits, Administration leaders expected last night to negotiate a compromise today on the tax bill—the most serious threat to early Congressional adjournment.

Confusion and strife surrounding the relief bill, another vital pre-adjournment measure, also was expected to be cleared up within the next day or two.

Developments this week on these two bills, leaders said, would largely tell the story of whether Congress will be able to adjourn before the Republican convention three weeks hence.

May Break Tax Deadlock.

A series of rapid votes in the Finance Committee today may break the deadlock over the tax bill. Treasury statisticians spent the week-end working up estimates on the various substitute proposals for the House bill in preparation for today's showdown.

Week-end expressions from committee members disclosed a flare-up against the latest compromise proposal—an increase in individual income and corporation taxes with a light surtax on undistributed corporate earnings.

This proposal nevertheless still had strong backing, but several Senators said they would prefer to return to the original compromise plan, which was based on higher taxes on undistributed income, calculated to bring in the $620,000,000 of needed new revenue.

Members of the committee disclosed that either compromise would "junk" the House provision for high taxes on holding companies—which some spokesmen in the hearings characterized as another "death sentence."

May Retain Present Tax.

Despite uncertainty over the final form of the tax bill, there seemed little doubt the Finance Committee would approve retaining the present flat corporate income tax, with a surtax on undistributed profits, and imposing the normal income tax on dividends.

There appeared to be no sentiment for the bill passed by the House levying graduated rates up to 42½ per cent against the net income of corporations, depending upon how much they distributed.

Under the latest proposal for a compromise, the normal individual income tax would be raised from 4 to 5 per cent; corporations would pay a flat 18 per cent tax on net income, with a surtax of 7 per cent on that part undistributed, and all dividends would be subject to the normal income tax.

This plan seemed to have the backing of a majority of the committee last week, but within the past day or two several committee members have turned back toward an earlier compromise plan under which corporations would pay a flat tax of 15 or 16 per cent, with a surtax ranging up to perhaps 40 per cent. This would eliminate the raise in personal income tax rates.

To Hear Ickes' Views.

While the Finance Committee struggles with the tax problem, the Senate Appropriations Committee probably will hear the belated testimony of Secretary Ickes on the relief bill. Ickes was scheduled to appear Friday, but canceled his appearance.

Ickes is the center of a sharp dispute over the relief bill. Senator Hayden (Democrat), Arizona, has offered an amendment to appropriate $700,000,000 for the Secretary's Public Works Administration, in addition to the $1,425,000,000 for Harry L. Hopkins' Works Progress Administration.

Various alternatives have been proposed, including one that Ickes' present revolving fund of about $250,000,000 be reappropriated as a fund for grants to States for public works projects.

President Roosevelt tried to smooth the troubled waters last week with an announcement that PWA and the Resettlement Administration would be continued with money from WPA's $1,425,000,000.

This drew attacks from Republicans on the Senate Committee. Senator Steiwer, of Oregon, protested that the President would have no authority to use this fund for PWA. He said if the President had such authority, he might also be able to continue the Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing project and the Florida ship canal.

Steiwer Seeks Details.

"I'd like to know," Steiwer said yesterday, "whether we are really going to spend this money for work relief or whether the Administration is asserting the right to make important deviations from it for the construction of projects Congress has never considered or rejected."

Steiwer and other Republican members of the committee were talking of calling Comptroller General McCarl for an interpretation of the relief bill as passed by the House.

With the relief and tax bills approaching the Senate floor, leaders pushed ahead with other legislation to clear the way for adjournment. The 1936 London Naval Treaty will be taken up by the Senate today, with the omnibus flood control bill to follow it, probably tomorrow.

The House, finished with "must" legislation, was planning to spend the week on minor bills and conference reports. The Townsend investigating committee will resume hearings Tuesday, with Dr. Francis E. Townsend, founder of the old-age pension movement, on the witness stand.

Politics and People

Charles D. Hilles, G. O. P.'s Mystery Man, Has 'Connections,' But They Are Liabilities.

By Franklyn Waltman

MYSTERY, like the element of uncertainty, gives a twang to politics which makes it the most exciting of all national pastimes. But it is usually just so much hokum and window-dressing. When a political figure has nothing else, but wishes to remain in the picture, he assumes an air of mystery.

Take as an example, Charles Dewey Hilles, Republican National Committeeman from New York. There is no more mysterious figure in current politics—unless it be Senator William Edgar Borah, of Idaho. Mr. Hilles usually is associated with smoke-filled-room political conferences. He seldom gives interviews and never commits himself in advance. Consequently, it is not extraordinary that he is usually found on the winner's bandwagon in the end.

At present Mr. Hilles is taking part in a number of secret—oh, very secret—political pow-wows. One day he is reputed to be supporting the Alf M. Landon candidacy—a report spread by the Landon foes who wish to make it appear he is a child of Wall Street. The next day Mr. Hilles is reported to be leading an old guard "stop Landon" movement—a report also spread by Landon foes to prove that none but the farmers want the Kansan.

But Mr. Hilles says nothing. In reply to inquiries of New York Republicans, he urges them not to be too precipitate, that he is checking around and in a day or two he will confer with a big-shot from the West. He is supposed to control the influential "old guard." This sort of Mumbo-jumbo performance on his part will continue until the day of the Cleveland convention.

The truth is that there is no Republican "old guard" any more and, except for the fact that some people who should know better fall for the mysterious stuff, Mr. Hilles is not with any great influence. It is true that he has some Wall Street connections—but those are liabilities, not assets, in politics. As for the "old guard," it may or may not have surrendered, but it is rapidly dying out. Even those who remain have been subjected to flank attacks at home, such as the defeat in Massachusetts of National Committeeman John Richardson as a delegate to the Cleveland convention, and the ousting of former Senator David A. Reed from his national committee post in Pennsylvania. The young Republicans of New York keep even Mr. Hilles feeling uncomfortable.

The truth is further that Mr. Hilles will be for the Republican Presidential aspirant most likely to win the nomination—which, at this time, is to say, Gov. Landon. He cannot do otherwise, because in every poll taken in New York—among women, among the young Republicans and among the rank and file of the party, the Kansan has been the undisputed choice.

* * *

Now Senator Borah appears to be simulating the Hilles' mystery tactics, although he denounces all other attributes of the New York committeeman. Unable to attract any substantial popular support to his candidacy, the Lion of Idaho remains in the political picture by assuming an air of mystery as to what he proposes to do if the Cleveland convention does not do as he says.

Of course, some Republicans do not care what Senator Borah does. They feel that throughout his life he has been a disruptive, rather than constructive, influence within the party and now that he is assuming a dog in the manger attitude they are beginning to believe he is set on a course of "rule or ruin."

It is to be noted that to date Senator Borah has not publicly said a single disapproving word about Gov. Landon. All the stories that the Idahoan intends to "do a job" on the Kansan, all the reports that he will bolt the party should the Kansan be nominated, are based on what Senator Borah is supposed to be thinking or what his close friends assert. Over the week-end, his campaign manager asserted that he would "expose" Gov. Landon before the convention, if Senator Borah did not do so before.

Periodically in recent weeks the country has been treated to an outburst of stories predicting that Senator Borah would turn savagely on Gov. Landon and thus make impossible his nomination. These stories have come on the heels of a Borah defeat.

Actually it is all very silly. If Senator Borah knows anything about Gov. Landon that the county does not, it is his duty to the Nation and to his party to reveal it. Despite Mr. Borah, Gov. Landon might be the next President of the United States. And it can be presumed that if the Idahoan had the goods on the Kansan, he would have revealed it long before this.

But it is unlikely that Senator Borah knows anything damaging to the Landon reputation. Although he may have been unknown in the East until a year ago, Gov. Landon is well known to the people of Kansas. The Kansas Democrats did not pull any punches in opposing him for the governorship in 1932 and 1934—nor did the "goat gland doctor," John Brinkley, who opposed him as an Independent.

So, until the Lion of Idaho and his campaign manager become more specific in their opposition to Gov. Landon—the "dog with the bone" which always is in danger—the country will just put these Borah efforts down as cries of "sour grapes" and with a yo-hum, turn to the sports pages.

Socialists Plan New Deal Fight At Convention

'Disown Roosevelt' Will Be Keynote of Party; Thomas Favored.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 17.—Socialist Party leaders said tonight the keynote of their national convention at Cleveland this week would be "Disown Roosevelt."

The party's "biggest job," Secretary Clarence Senior declared, was to "teach the voters that the New Deal's program is not the Socialist program."

Confusion existed in the public mind over "so-called socialistic measures," Senior asserted, because he said the Administration had "taken over the language" of Socialism without taking over its goal.

Difference Defined.

The difference between the New Deal and Socialism would be sharply defined from the very beginning of the Socialist convention, which opens Saturday, the party secretary said.

The task would probably be allotted, he added, to the keynote speaker, who was expected to be the national chairman, Leo Kryzcki, of Milwaukee.

The Scialist platform, Senior predicted, would be "very short," with two probable outstanding planks: "(1) A proposed constitutional amendment "to make possible adequate social security legislation on a Nation-wide scale," and (2) A declaration that "Socialism is now an economic possibility."

Senior and other party leaders agreed there was little opopsition to nomination of Norman Thomas, of New York, quadrennial candidate for President, but there were a number of aspirants to be his running mate.

Woman Proposed.

One of these was a woman, Mary Donovan, of Indianapolis, who served as secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee. Others were Powers Hapgood, of Indianapolis, United Mine Workers official; Howard Kester, of Nashville, Tenn., and James Maurer, of Reading, Pa., former president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor.

Cheerful over last fall's municipal victories in Bridgeport, Conn., and Reading, Pa., the party headquarters expressed concern over resignation of labor leaders who turned from the Socialist banner to Roosevelt in the last few weeks. Some votes would be lost, they said, but all of labor would not follow the leaders.

The American Liberty League, in its monthly bulletin, printed a letter from its executive committee to its members urging each member to vote in the coming election and to endeavor to obtain promises to vote from as many other citizens as possible.

"The exercise of your right to vote constitutes the premium you pay to protect the most valuable insurance policy ever written—the Constitution of the United States," the league's committee said.

A. F. L. Appeals To Business For More Jobs

By the Associated Press.

Reiterating that re-employment is not keeping pace with recovery, the American Federation of Labor yesterday issued a new appeal to the Government and business to co-operate with labor groups in an attempt to put the jobless back to work.

Asserting that gains in profits of large corporations have far exceeded gains in production and that leading corporations are reporting earnings close to 1926 levels, the Federation expressed concern over "the exceedingly serious re-employment shortage."

In its monthly survey of business, the Federation asked:

"If we cannot count on business, without control, to put the unemployed to work, how then can a place be found for them in America's workshop, where they may produce wealth and earn the income necessary for a good life?"

Says Re-employment Lags.

Answering this is a renewed appeal to both business and the Government for joint action, the Federation said 'this co-operative basis, as distinct from Government control, cannot be too strongly emphasized."

The survey asserted that under NRA re-employment kept pace with business recovery, but that since the Supreme Court had outlawed the recovery agency it had fallen far behind.

"By March, 1936," it said, "business had traveled 72 per cent of the way back to normal, but only 46 per cent of the depression unemployed had gone back to work.

"If re-employment had kept pace with business recovery, 3,120,000 of the depression unemployed would be back at work today. Actually only 5,200,000 have found jobs in industry. That is, when all industries are counted we have a re-employment shortage of 2,850,000."

4,000,000 Added to Ranks.

The survey further reported business was "not even providing enough work for those who had jobs in 1929 and lost them in depression; far less is it providing jobs for the 4,000,000 who have been added to America's army of work seekers since 1929—young people asking for work for the first time.

"This means that, of the total 12,184,000 who were unemployed in March, we can only count on business to provide work for 4,000,000 even when it reaches normal. The other 8,000,000 will still be jobless unless re-employment makes far better progress than it has made to date."

Center Plans Program.

A musical and dramatic program Wednesday night in Garfield School will close the season's activities of the Garfield Community Center. The Birney Community Center Choral Society, directed by Mrs. Edna Dockings, and the Garfield Dramatic Club, directed by Parthenia G. Brown, will give the entertainment.

Lowden Picked To Draft G.O.P. Farm Program

Former Illinois Governor Praised for Knowledge of Agriculture.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 17.—Former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, veteran student of farm problems, was named today by Western headquarters of the Republican National Committee as one of the carpenters who will shape the farm plank in the party platform at Cleveland next month.

Lowden's "advice and counsel on agricultural issues have been of great assistance to the Republican leaders and his keen judgment will undoubtedly be reflected in the platform," Harrison E. Spangler, division chairman, said in a statement.

"The Republican convention, I am sure, will be more than eager to have his views before it in its deliberations," the chairman added.

Lives As Farmer.

Spangler said Lowden was in a position to direct the party's policy toward "restoration of agriculture," because he was "one of the farmers, lives as they do, and knows their problems."

"The people of the great Middle West have great respect for Gov. Lowden," Spangler continued. "He also has the confidence of the agricultural interests throughout the country."

Spangler declared it was "generally known" that the former Governor—who ran unsuccessfully for the Presidential nomination in 1920—had opinions on the farm question which "differ sharply" from those of the Roosevelt Administration. He added:

"He is drastically opposed to the attempts of the Roosevelt Administration to make a political football out of agriculture and also to the philosophy of scarcity instead of abundance."

Seeks Advice.

In addition to Lowden, Spangler said the Republican convention will "seek and welcome the advice of many of our leading practical farmers, agricultural leaders and other students of the question to the end that we shall have a sound, workable and permanent program which will insure to the American farmers a market both at home and abroad.

"We must restore a real purchasing power to the consumers of our country. The greatest market in the world, the American farm market, must be restored. Foreign markets must be developed. The loss of these markets under the Roosevelt policies are alarming."

Railway Strike In Mexico Due To Start Today

Last-Minute Efforts to Ward Off Walkout Believed Futile.

By the United Press.

Mexico City, May 17.—More than 40,000 Mexican railway employes tonight awaited a strike call which would tie up the nation's largest railroad system.

Hurried last-minute efforts by the government to ward off the strike, called for 5 p. m. tomorrow (7 p. m., Eastern standard time), were believed fruitless.

The strike would affect the Ferrocarriles Nacionales de Mexico, a railroad with 13,192 kilometers (8,245 miles) out of a total of 23,254 kilometers (14,534 miles) of Mexican lines.

The road, constructed by capital raised largely in foreign countries, especially the Unted States and England, is now controlled by the Mexican government. No dividends have been paid recently.

Strike notices were posted May 6 by the Union of Mexican Railwaymen. An affiliate of the Confederation of Mexican Workers, the union is led by Vicente Lombardo Toledano.

Strikers are demanding 16 points, centering around insistence that the railroad pay one full day's pay each week but to give the workers a day of rest. The railroad is willing to make this concession to employes in shops, on trains and tracks, but will not extend it to office workers who are employed on a monthly basis.

Lines have been sharply drawn for the strike, with union leaders even demanding that employes receive full salaries during the strike period, and also to pay the union all expenses involved in fomenting the strike.

Countering this, the railroad has threatened to deprive all striking laborers of their acquired rights such as seniority and service accumulations toward pensions.

Workers were given a 16.66 per cent wage increase last February 20, but no day of rest on pay was agreed to. The laborers now demand that the rest day pay be retroactive to date of the pay increase.

Awaiting Trial, Contractor Shot To Death in Car

Tennessee Deputy Sheriff Is Wounded; Hospital Refuses Data.

By the Associated Press.

Copper Hill, Tenn., May 17.—B. W. McFadden, Asheville, N. C., contractor, was found shot to death in his automobile near here late today.

Deputy Sheriff W. F. Pierce said he was struck by four bullets from a submarine gun.

McFadden was shot as he sat in his auto on the highway. The machine, officers said, was peppered with submachine gun bullets.

McFadden was to go on trial here tomorrow on a charge of shooting Deputy Sheriff E. G. Gaddis last December 24.

Deputy Is Wounded.

Shortly after McFadden's body was found with a bullet in the head, two near the heart and another in the abdomen, Deputy Gaddis was brought to a hospital here with pistol wounds in the right leg and right foot. His wounds were not explained and information was refused at the hospital.

In Nashville State Highway Commissioner Briggs Smith said McFadden was shot last fall as an outgrowth of labor trouble on a highway project on which he was employed here. Smith said the controversy revolved about charges that the Croppen Construction Co., which employed McFadden, was giving outsiders preference over residents of this section in employment.

McFadden, a subcontractor on a WPA road project from Ducktown to the North Carolina line, was shot in the face during what officers called a "riot" of workers.

The contractors insisted they maintained the rules and regulations of the WPA and hired only qualified relief workers on the rolls on the Federal relief office.

Others Were Injured.

During the "riot" several other men were injured by rocks and brickbats.

The road project was suspended entirely. McFadden spent many weeks in the hospital.

On Christmas Eve, Gaddis was called to the door of his home in the dark and shot in the left arm and side by an assailant Gaddis said fled toward North Carolina in an automobile.

Gaddis swore out a warrant for McFadden on a charge of shooting with intent to kill. The contractor later was indicted on that charge.

McFadden surrendered to Hamilton County officers at Chattanooga last February 14, while Polk County Sheriff Riggs was in Raleigh trying to obtain papers for the contractor's extradition from North Carolina.

Sir Philip Greet Dies; Noted Actor

London, May 17 (AP).—Sir Philip Ben Greet, noted Shakespearian actor, died today at the age of 78.

He had entered a London nursing home a few weeks ago.

Sir Philip toured with the play "Everyman" in the United States in 1902, and from then until 1914 was almost exclusively identified with the American stage. In the autumns of 1929 to 1932 he again tourned America.

He was born September 24, 1857, on board a recruiting ship for sailors which his father commanded, off the Tower of London. Originally he planned to follow his father's profession, but instead became a schoolmaster. His first appearance on the stage was at Southampton, England, Novmeber 1, 1879.

Sir Philip also was prominent in theatrical managing. Among those who played their first important roles under him were H. B. Irving, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Sybil Thorndick, Leon Quartermaine and Dorethea Baird.

Packers Oppose 'Windfall' Taxes

By the Associated Press.

Opposition to processing and "windfall" taxes was expressed by William Whitfield Woods, president of the Institute of American Meat Packers, in a letter to Chairman Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, of the Finance Committee yesterday.

"Notwithstanding the persistent efforts to make it appear that the proposed 'tax on unjust enrichment,' so-called, is sound and that additional processing taxes on various foods, clothing and other necessities of life would be desirable," Woods wrote Harrison, "the facts remain that:

"The processing tax on hogs and the use to which it was put in reducing hog production forced a number of pork packers into bankruptcy and brought hundreds of others to the brink of financial ruin."

Hopkins, Tugwell Roosevelt Guests

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt returned late yesterday from a 48-hour yacht cruise with chiefs of the Relief and Resettlement Administrations as his guests.

Plans for spending new work relief money proposed in the pending deficiency bill were understood to have been discussed by the President, Hary L. Hopkins, relief administrator, and Rexford G. Tugwell, Resettlement Administration head.

Mr. Roosevelt said last week that Tugwell's agency and the Public Works Administration headed by Secretary Ickes would be taken care or—on a reduced scale—out of the relief fund.

Perfect boating weather prevailed while the Presidential party cruised down the Potomac River and on Chesapeake Bay aboard the Yacht Potomac. He boarded the yacht Friday at Annapolis and landed yesterday at the Navy Yard here.

First Lady Indorses Boys' Club Campaign

Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday added her support to the campaign for $135,000 with which the Metropolitan Police Boys Club hopes to establish additional clubs and a summer camp.

"I hope Maj. Brown's work," she said, "will spread to other communities. Boys are energetic and active and they can work successfully if helped and directed to good things."

$40,000 Is Allotted For Talking Books

By the United Press.

Instruction and entertainment of most of the Nation's 125,000 blind by "talking books" was started on a country-wide scale by the New Deal last night.

President Roosevelt allotted $40,000 work-relief funds for recording classic literature and modern-day writing on portable phonographs, and distributing them to poor sightless.

The American Federation for the Blind and prominent actors, writers and radio announcers are cooperating. The program was launched in New York City.

1,000 at Rites Of Sheriff Slain By Mad Hermit

Travel Miles Over Country Roads to Attend Orange Funeral.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Orange, Va., May 17.—Sheriff William Young, who died a victim of the blazing guns of a mad Negro hermit and his spinster sister, was buried a hero here today in a little shady churchyard.

More than 1,000 persons came to pay him a last farewell. They began their trek at dawn, traveling miles over country roads to the services, held at Antioch Baptist Church, near here.

Ten miles away lay the bodies of the Negroes who killed him. They were buried in a packing box, under a clump of blackberry bushes near the home they defended against a posse of 2,500 Friday night.

They were William Wailes and his sister, Cora. Wailes killed Young when the sheriff sought to serve a lunacy warrant. A posse was organized to capture the Negroes. Late at night, after five men had been wounded, the two Negroes were killed. Their house was set afire. Next morning their charred bodies were given simple burial.

Five hundred milled on the outside of the church today, and as many sat inside and listened in solemn silence to the last rites.

The services began at 2:30. But as sunset came on, several hundred still lingered around Young's flower-strewn grave.

Landon Backers Renew N. Y. Drive

Jamestown, N. Y., May 17 (AP).—Forces back of Gov. Alf Landon renewed their drive today for indorsement of the Kansan by individual units in the New York State Association of Young Republican Clubs.

The Landon backers were unsuccessful during the convention of the association, which closed this morning, in their effort to get the delegates on record for the Midwestern candidate.

Nevertheless, George H. Sibley, of New York, leader of the Landon group, interpreted action of the delegates last night in refusing to take a poll as favorable.

"The sentiment favoring the nomination of Gov. Landon received further impetus at the Jamestown meeting when President Mahoney announced that, pursuant to the resolution adopted by the board of governors, polls of the member clubs had been completed by clubs located in 17 counties, and all showed an overwhelming vote for Landon," Sibley said.

Convict Eludes Posse; Trailed By Bloodhound

Beavers Fires at Pursuers, Flees to Thickets; Two Others at Large.

By the Associated Press.

McAlester, Okla., May 17.—One of the best-trained bloodhounds in the Southwest "jumped" Convict Claude Beavers from underbrush near Clayton late today, but haggard man hunters failed to capture the ringleader of the murderous band which broke from Oklahoma's penitentiary Wednesday.

Beavers, one of only three convicts still at large, dashed back into the thickets. A fresh posse was rushed to the area.

Ordinarily a muzzle is kept on Old Boston to keep him from biting everything in his path, but the muzzle was off today in the hunt through the Kiamichi Mountains for the heavily armed Beavers.

"Of all the bloodhounds, the convicts fear Old Boston most," said Warden Roy Kenny. "He hasn't a friend."

Yesterday Beavers fired twice at officers when forced out of underbrush briefly and posses are prepared for a gun fight whenever they corner him. He later appeared at a farmhouse and terrorized a family with a gun, leaving only after obtaining food.

Beavers, Julius Bohannon and A. C. McArthur were the last felons at large of the 24 who dashed from the prison brickyard, slaying C. D. Powell, prison worker, in their mad flight.

The wounded Jess Cunningham and Claude Fugate were retaken yesterday. Possemen rounded up Claude Pugh, Archie Herring and Bill Anderson the day before.

Lyddane Goes To Hagerstown With His Wife

Her 2d Trial in Alleged Plot to Have Him Killed Opens Today.

By Edward T. Folliard.
A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., May 17.—Anne Lyddane attended church services in Washington this morning and then motored here to stand trial a second time on a charge of plotting the murder of her husband.

The trial, shifted to Hagerstown because it was felt Mrs. Lyddane couldn't get a fair hearing in Rockville, opens tomorrow morning in the circuit court of Washington County.

Mrs. Lyddane's trial last June in Rockville resulted in a hung jury, six members reportedly voting for acquittal and six for conviction.

Accompanied by Husband.

On the journey here today, Mrs. Lyddane, a 29-year-old attractive blonde, was accompanied by her stocky, curly-headed husband, Francis (Slom) Lyddane.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh, of Montgomery County, and the other prosecutors will tell a jury this week that "Slom" was an unwanted husband—that Mrs. Lyddane, anxious to collect $30,000 insurance on him and remove an obstacle in the way of her love for another man, conspired with four underworld characters to have him murdered.

But "Slom" Lyddane will take the stand as a defense witness to show the jury that he does not want it to believe such charges. He has stood by his wife from the moment she was arrested on April 1, 1935, and that is one reason the case has been called "bizarre."

State Senator Stedman Prescott and the other defense attorneys are counting heavily on "Slom" and a long list of prominent character witnesses from Montgomery County to win an acquittal.

Had Been "Indiscreet."

Prosecutor Pugh's chief witness will be John (Googy) Carnell, former Rockville bartender, who has previously testified that Anne Lyddane paid him money to hire professional killers to murder her husband, and also Josephine Beall, wife of a Darnestown garage owner, with whom Mrs. Lyddane admittedly had been "indiscreet."

Prescott will contend that "Googy" and his underworld friends were simply trying to blackmail Mrs. Lyddane, extracting money from her on a threat of exposing her relations with Arthur Beall.

Two witnesses in the Rockville trial will be missing here—Bert C. Farrar, Treasury writing expert, who is on a world cruise, and George Kelchner, of Rockville, who died several months ago.

By agreement between counsel, the testimony given by the two men at the Rockville trial will be admitted in the trial here.

White House Visit Proves Boon To Reformatory Girls' Spirit

Now that they have been to a party—and a White House party at that—the delinquent girls at the National Training School are expected to push their behavior graph upward.

They were told as much yesterday by their superintendent, Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, as they sat behind ancient school desks for a Sunday school lesson in the chapel.

"Remember," said Dr. Smith, "that one of the most important women in the world (Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt) has singled each of you out for her gracious attention. There were no strings tied to it except the hope that the impression on you would be worthwhile.

"I shall expect your behavior hereafter to show that it has been worthwhile. You all behaved beautifully on the White House lawn, but life isn't all on the White House lawn. It has its kitchens and laundries and it is there it is put to the test."

New Spirit Among Girls.

Dr. Smith afterward said that there is a new spirit among the girls since their thrilling experience as Mrs. Roosevelt's guests.

It is probable, too, that they will have a chance to play host to Mrs. Roosevelt.

"Before I left the White House," Dr. Smith said, "Mrs. Roosevelt told me if we would arrange a track meet, She would be glad to come out and witness it and give a prize."

Dr. Smith, in an article prepared for the United Press, said that Mrs. Roosevelt's White House party would go down in history as the most eventful day in the treatment of delinquent children in America.

"What she has done," Dr. Smith wrote, "will no doubt affect public opinion favorably and accomplish more for delinquent children than all the White House conferences of experts.

Appreciate Interest.

"The press is interested. We appreciate their interest; at the same time we are prompted to ask the basis of their interest. Is it because they feel that this action of Mrs. Roosevelt's is sensational, even bizarre?

"If the young women of the press will get the significance of a couplet which I found in a diary of one of my children years ago, they can do much to direct public opinion in a constructive way. A young girl whom I used as a guide to show visitors through the Texas school made this record:

"'Showed visitors around today. They asked lots of dumb questions. They was surprised that we was more like a girl's boarding school than a reformatory, and that we dressed like other girls. I felt like saying (but didn't):

"'We aint no zoo,
No more than you.'"

Mrs. Hanlein Dies; Funeral Tomorrow

Mrs. Bertha Hanlein, 73, widow of the late Myer Hanlein, died yesterday at her home, 5420 Connecticut avenue.

Mrs. Hanlein was the sister of Harry E. Kaufman, of this city. Surviving also are three other brothers, Isidore, Morris and Sidney; one sister, Mrs. E. D. Derdorf; and three children Joseph, Gussie and Helen, all of this city.

Mrs. Hanlein, a native of Washington, was long prominent in Jewish affairs. She was a member of the Washington Hebrew Congregation and the Sisterhood.

Funeral services will be held from the home tomorrow at 2 p. m. Dr. Abram Simon, of the Congregation, will officiate.

10,000 Attend Leonardtown Military Mass

By the Associated Press.

Leonardtown, Md., May 17.—Approximately 10,000 southern Maryland Catholics knelt today in the celebration of a military field mass on the green lawn of Leonard Hall, not far from the spot where a band of colonists fell upon their knees in a mass of Thanksgiving for their safe arrival three centuries ago.

The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, pontificated at the military mass, held under the auspices of the Southern Maryland Conference of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade. He was assisted by the Very Rev. Charles E. Roach, V. F., who served as archpriest; the Rev. John S. Knight, S. J., pastor of St. Aloysius Church, Leonardtown, deacon; the Rev. Horace B. McKenna, S. J., of St. Michael's Church, Ridge, sub-deacon, and the Very Rev. Harry A. Quinn, rector of the Baltimore Cathedral, master of ceremonies.

More than 5,000 persons, many of them children, moved in a procession through Leonardtown to Leonard Hall, where on the lawn, in the shadow of a flagstaff surmounted by a cross and flying the American, Papal, Crusader and Maryland flags, a century-old altar of wood was set among flowers for the solemn ritual.

The altar was brought to southern Maryland more than 100 years ago by priests of the Society of Jesus.

A reviewing stand, before which the procession passed before the mass, was occupied by Bishop McNamara and the other officers of the mass; Thomas P. McDonagh, of La Plata, grand marshal; State Senators J. Allan Coad, of St. Marys; Joseph L. Donovan, of Howard; Vernon Cooksey, of Charles; Delegates Charles V. Hayden, of St. Marys, and Rudolph A. Carrico and James B. Monroe, of Charles; Capt. Edward McK. Johnson, of the State police, and nearly a hundred nuns and members of religious orders.

Born in Jackson County, Ohio, Dr. Stearns came here as a child when his father took a position with the Treasury Department. He graduated from Ohio University and the School of Osteopathy, Kirksville, Mo.

After receiving his medical degree, he returned to Washington, where he had been practicing ever since. He was a Spanish War veteran and a member of the American, Middle Atlantic and District Osteopatic Associations.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rebecca Otis Stearns, and two children.

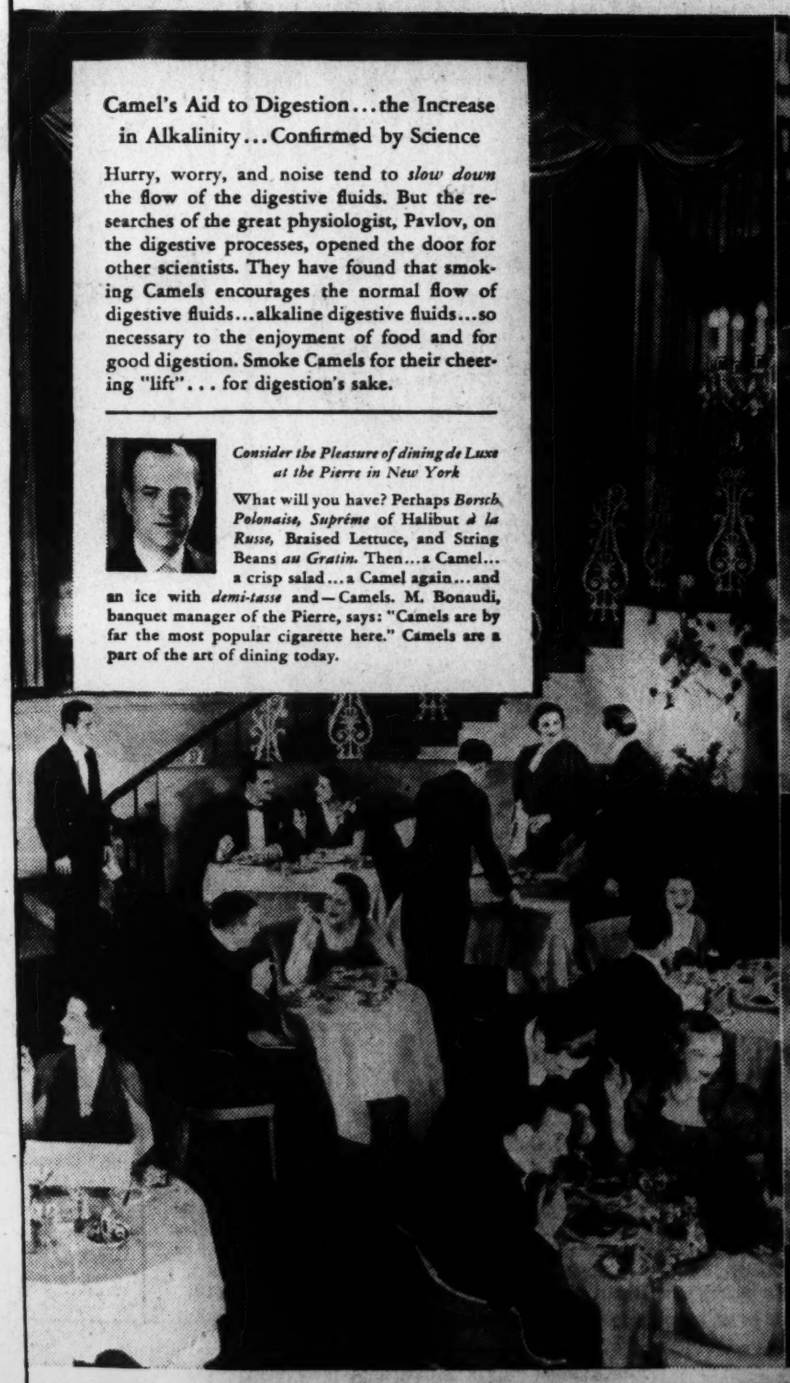
—for Digestion's sake—smoke Camels

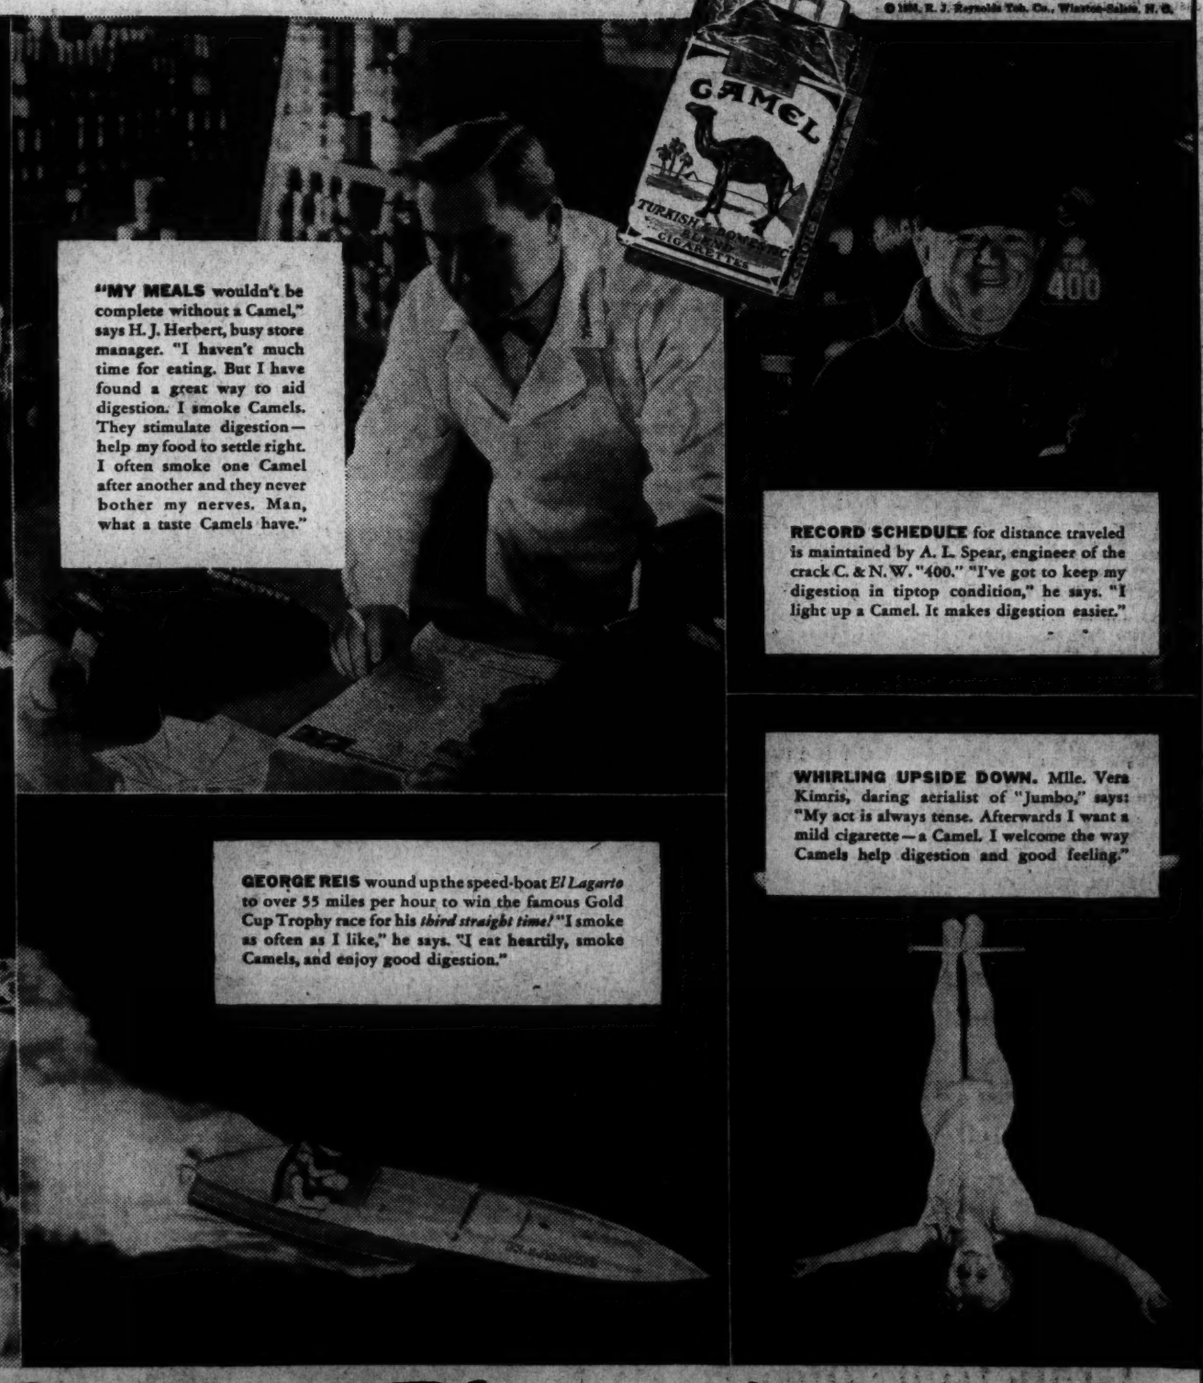


Camel's Aid to Digestion... the Increase in Alkalinity... Confirmed by Science

Hurry, worry, and noise tend to slow down the flow of the digestive fluids. But the researches of the great physiologist, Pavlov, on the digestive processes, opened the door for other scientists. They have found that smoking Camels encourages the normal flow of digestive fluids... alkaline digestive fluids... so necessary to the enjoyment of food and for good digestion. Smoke Camels for their cheering "lift"... for digestion's sake.

Consider the Pleasure of dining de Luxe at the Pierre in New York

What will you have? Perhaps Borsch Polonaise, Supréme of Halibut à la Russe, Braised Lettuce, and String Beans au Gratin. Then... a Camel... a crisp salad... a Camel again... and an ice with demi-tasse and—Camels. M. Bonaudi, banquet manager of the Pierre, says: "Camels are by far the most popular cigarette here." Camels are a part of the art of dining today.



"MY MEALS wouldn't be complete without a Camel," says H. J. Herbert, busy store manager. "I haven't much time for eating. But I have found a great way to aid digestion. I smoke Camels. They stimulate digestion—help my food to settle right. I often smoke one Camel after another and they never bother my nerves. Man, what a taste Camels have."

RECORD SCHEDULE for distance traveled is maintained by A. L. Spear, engineer of the crack C. & N. W. "400." "I've got to keep my digestion in tiptop condition," he says. "I light up a Camel. It makes digestion easier."

GEORGE REIS wound up the speed-boat El Lagarto to over 55 miles per hour to win the famous Gold Cup Trophy race for his third straight time! "I smoke as often as I like," he says. "I eat heartily, smoke Camels, and enjoy good digestion."

WHIRLING UPSIDE DOWN. Mlle. Vera Kimris, daring aerialist of "Jumbo," says: "My act is always tense. Afterwards I want a mild cigarette—a Camel. I welcome the way Camels help digestion and good feeling."

...made from Costlier Tobaccos!

• Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

Sokolow Dead; Zionist Leader And Journalist

Was Moving Spirit in Work of Re-establishing Race in Palestine.

London, May 17 (Palcor Agency). Dr. Nahum Sokolow, 75, outstanding Jewish leader, died here tonight.

He was honorary president of the World Zionist Organization and the Jewish Agency for Palestine. He had been president of these two international bodies from 1931 to 1935.

Regarded as the dean of Hebrew literature and also as one of the foremost diplomats and scholars of the Jewish people in modern times, Dr. Sokolow was a principal figure at the Paris peace conference. There he helped to obtain the right for the Jewish people to re-establish the Jewish national home in Palestine.

In the course of his travels in the interests of the Zionist movement he had conferences with the leaders of virtually every nation, including several Presidents of the United States.

One of the founders of the modern Zionist movement, Dr. Sokolow was born in 1861 at Wyzsogrod, near Plock, Poland. Launching upon a literary career in youth, he became editor of Hazefira, a famous Hebrew periodical, in 1884. It was his work during this period in creating a new type of Hebrew newspaper which earned for him the title of 'the Founder of Modern Hebrew Journalism."

During his lifetime he wrote innumerable treatises and volumes on Jewish culture and philosophy, belles-lettres and Zionist problems. His "History of Zionism," a two-volume work, is regarded as a standard authority on the subject.

Specializing in philosophy and modern languages, Dr. Sokolow contributed to the leading European journals in various languages. He could read and write in Hebrew, Yiddish, English, Polish, Russian, French, Greek, Italian, German and others. His versatility could be seen in the fact that he wrote a geography, a primer of self-instruction in English and biography of Spinoza.

$10,000 Prize For Novel Won By Iowa Wife

Mrs. Van Etten, Teacher, Victor in Contest in First Attempt.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 17.—The Atlantic Monthly Press announced tonight its award of the Atlantic Novel Prize of $10,000 to Mrs. Winifred Mayne Van Etten, 34-year-old English teacher, of Mount Vernon, Iowa, for her first novel, "I Am the Fox."

"I Am the Fox" is described as a characterization of a girl brought up in Iowa of the twentieth century. The book will appear in August.

Mrs. Van Etten was born in Emmetsburg, Iowa, and was graduated from Cornell College at Mount Vernon, Iowa. She holds a master's degree and is married to Bernard Van Etten. Besides her writing, teaching and housekeeping, Mrs. Van Etten has been a stenographer employed in bank and law offices.

Except for one story in her college magazine, no other story by her has appeared in magazines. The prize, $5,000 of which is an outright award and $5,000 as an advance of royalties, is the largest award offered by any American publisher with book rights alone involved.

Will Build a Home.

Mount Vernon, Iowa, May 17 (AP). Mrs. Winifred Mayne Van Etten, winner of $10,000 Atlantic novel prize, said tonight she and her husband will use part of the money to build a home, but the remainder will be used as a "nest egg."

"I don't suppose it would be possible to repeat right away on a thing like that and it would be good to have a nest egg," said Mrs. Van Etten philosophically.

The 34-year-old English teacher told friends a quarrel with her husband over the sportsmanship of fox hunting inspired her prize-winning novel.

"There's no element of sportsmanship to it," she said. "It just seems like a dirty trick on the fox."

Mrs. Van Etten explained, however, the novel is not about fox hunting, but the story of a struggle between a red-headed girl who identified herself as the fox, having the same feeling toward the hunters. The man who desired to marry her took the attitude of the hunter.

Representative Dies

WILLIAM D. THOMAS.

Rep. Thomas, Of New York, Dies in Capital

Representative William D. Thomas, 56, of Hoosick Falls, N. Y., died last night at the home of his sister, Mrs. Richard O. Jones, 644 A street southeast. Mr. Thomas had been suffering for several months from a heart ailment.

Born in Middle Granville, N. Y., March 22, 1880, Mr. Thomas attended public schools and received a Ph. G. degree at Union College, Schnectady, in 1904. He had been a pharmacist at Hoosick Falls.

Mr. Thomas married Caroline G. Haffner, of Broklyn, N. Y., in 1907. The widow and one daughter, Miss Lillian H. Thomas, survive.

In 1917, Mr. Thomas was elected town clerk of Hoosick Falls, serving in that capacity until 1925. He was a member of the New York House of Representatives from 1925 to 1927 and was treasurer of Rensselaer County, New York, from 1927 to 1933. He was chairman of the county Republican committee from 1927 until his resignation to enter Congress in 1934.

Mr. Thomas was elected to the Seventy-third Congress January 30, 1934, to fill the unexpired term of James S. Parker. He was a director of the Permanent Savings and Loan Association of Hoosick Falls and of the Peoples First National Bank of that town. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church and of the Masonic, Knights of Pythias and Elks lodges.

Small Dies in Illinois

falo, deer, elk and birds, which he sold to zoos.

He began his political life as a member of the Kankakee county board of supervisors, was clerk of the circuit court and served a term in the State senate. He was State treasurer for two terms and under President Taft was assistant treasurer in charge of the U. S. subtreasury at Chicago.

About a week ago he became ill of a bladder ailment and submitted to an operation. A second was performed Tuesday and he appeared to be recovering when the embolism developed.

Complicated Affairs.

The scandal which wrecked Small's political career, despite acquittal, was a complicated affair. During his first term as Governor the charge was made that, while he was State treasurer, he had used State funds to buy packing house securities which paid an average of 7 per cent interest of which the State received less than 2 per cent. To conceal the transactions, a mythical Grant Park bank was used, it was charged.

Checks for some of the interest allegedly paid by the packers were traced to Small's bank at Kankakee, where they were deposited to the credit of an unknown person. Subpenas were issued for the bank's records to show to whom the interest was credited, but a bank officer told the jury that a careless employe had "mislaid" them. For the four years covering the alleged conspiracy investigators could find no trace of Small's personal bank account.

Another attempt to find records of the Grant Park bank ended in testimony that a janitor, then dead, had burned the documents.

The jury deliberated an hour and 35 minutes and acquitted Small.

Witnesses Disappear.

Subsequently a juror and two Chicago hoodlums were indicted on bribery charges. The State's star witnesses disappeared before the trial and another acquittal resulted.

The witnesses, "Umbrella Mike" Boyle, a labor leader, and Ben Newmark, private detective, were found but refused to testify before a grand jury and were sent to jail. In a few days Gov. Small pardoned them.

Despite his acquittal on a criminal charge of withholding approximately $1,000,000 in interest collections, a civil suit for an accounting was decided against him. After an unsuccessful appeal to the State Supreme Court he paid the State more than $600,000 in settlement.

Small also was accused of granting pardons or paroles to the undeserving. Among those he pardoned were Harry and Alma Gusick, managers for the notorious John Torrio, predecessor to Al Capone. They had been convicted of white slavery. Another pardon was obtained by Edward (Spike) O'Donnell, notorious Chicago gangster, convicted of complicity in a $10,000 bank holdup. From Joliet Penitentiary O'Donnell directed his beer-running mob in a murderous war.

As chief executive of Illinois, Small acquired the sobriquet of "the hard roads Governor" because of his development of a network of paved highways throughout the State. His efforts in behalf of that system were largely responsible for his re-election as Governor in the midst of the accounting litigation. Seeking renomination in 1928 for a third term, he was defeated in the primary election by Louis L. Emmerson, who had been secretary of State.

Small rose to a position of prominence in the State and as head of the State Republican organization after establishing himself as a man of affairs in his home town, Kankakee. There he developed one of the largest and most prosperous farms in the State, organized and became president of a bank, published a newspaper and engaged as a real estate operator.

America And The "Isms."

The latest poll by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicates that 62 per cent of all voters in the United States agree that schools should teach the facts about all forms of government, whether communism or any other "ism." In short, America still indorses the ideal of academic freedom.

Legislators, both State and Federal, responsible for the enactment of laws now restricting teachers in this respect, would do well to take note. It is true that only in the District of Columbia is factual instruction specifically forbidden; the 22 States having laws on the subject merely prohibit advocacy of the "isms." But the results are similar. Highly conscientious as they are, teachers everywhere are reported to be avoiding all mention of communism, fascism and socialism for fear that their words might be construed as approving these systems.

The margin by which the principle of freedom of education is upheld is very pleasing. Nearly every balloter in the poll may be presumed to disapprove communism. And it is inconceivable that everyone was able to separate his deep revulsion for communism from his thoughts on the desirability of teaching the facts of communism in the schools. Many a ballot, then, must have been more of a vote against communism than a vote for or against freedom of education. Notwithstanding this fact, however, freedom of education won the support of nearly two-thirds of the cross-section approached by the Institute.

Results of the poll should encourage proponents of the Sisson bill, still awaiting action by the House. As must be thoroughly understood by now, the Sisson bill proposes to repeal a rider on the 1936 District appropriations act which forbids payment of any instructor who "teaches" or "advocates" communism. Unless this bill is enacted, the rider will continue in effect.

The fate of the Sisson bill concerns the country as a whole. Failure to kill the red rider would put Congress in the position of assuming that communism is a serious threat and that the best way to combat it is to teach the rising generation to hide its head, ostrich fashion, in the sand of ignorance. Since a large majority of voters dissociate themselves from that fatuous reasoning, Congress certainly can find no point in clinging to it.

M. Blum's Olive Branch.

Although it will be some weeks before the new French Chamber of Deputies convenes and a new government is formed, Leon Blum, the Socialist leader, speaks with the authority of one already robed in the mantle of high office.

It is now a certainty that he will be France's next premier in a cabinet supported by all the parties and groups forming the victorious Popular Front. The speech he made to the American Club of Paris can, therefore, be said to have the force of an official exposition of the foreign policies of the coming French government.

That speech was notable for its reasonableness and its moderation. Just as in previous statements M. Blum had sought to end widespread fears that the regime he plans to head would take steps to transform France at once into a collectivist state; just as he had sought to end the flight of capital from the republic by coming out strongly in favor of maintenance of the franc at its present parity, so in this latest utterance he sought earnestly to prove his conciliatory intent in the field of foreign affairs.

"France," he said, "wants to live in peace with all nations, whatever their internal political regime may be." He added:

> It must not be supposed for an instant that we are thinking today of pushing this country into a bellicose position through any spirit of hate or reprisal so as to avenge persecuted comrades or destroy this or that regime. We want peace with all; we want to work at peace with all nations, and we entirely exclude the idea of war or propaganda for a war of reprisals.

This is obviously an olive branch extended across the Rhine, and it loses nothing of its force by virtue of the fact that M. Blum is a Frenchman, a Socialist and a Jew—on all three counts, therefore, anything but an enthusiast for the Nazi regime.

But if the next premier of France earnestly desires the lessening of Franco-German tensions which have kept Europe on tenterhooks for so long, he wants also to tighten the bonds uniting his nation with the other great democracies of the world, notably Great Britain and the United States.

Americans will find of particular interest his reference to the "misunderstanding" on the war debt issue. Vague as it was, it may prove to be not without great significance for it was the first time since the fall of the Herriot cabinet in 1932 that any premier or prospective premier has even dared mention the problem. M. Blum was careful not to say what he proposed to do about the debts. But it is certain that if France shows any readiness to approach the United States on the matter this Nation will be willing to go more than half way to meet her.

Co-ordinating Public Projects.

Interest in the Senate Commerce Committee's omnibus flood control bill is overshadowed by a single amendment which that group has approved for addition to the measure. The committee proposes creation of a permanent National Resources Board to take the place of the temporary agency now chiefly engaged in co-ordinating and encouraging the activities of State planning boards.

As Senator Copeland points out, it is quite appropriate to consider the establishment of a National Resources Board in connection with the flood control bill. There are few, if any, fields in which scientific planning and co-ordination of policies is needed more than in the utilization and control of streams. Congress is contemplating the expenditure, over a number of years, of nearly $700,000,000 on dams, levees, dikes, etc. Various questions that have been raised as to the merits of some projects in these bills ought to be answered by a competent and nonpartisan body before the work goes forward.

It is obvious, moreover, that the flood control policy ought to be co-ordinated with soil conservation. The most advanced conservationists believe that the best place to arrest floods is on the watersheds where the snow melts and rain falls. Control of "little waters" has become a major thesis of many experts within the Administration. When so much money is to be spent, the least that can be demanded by the public is that it be used where it will most effectively prevent floods.

Of equal importance is the discouragement of pork barrel tactics in the selection of public improvements. Already the flood control bill has been threatened by the efforts of politicians to overload it with questionable projects. A permanent National Resources Board should provide invaluable aid in analyzing proposed undertakings according to their merits and their relationship with national needs and policies.

An excellent beginning in this work of planning national improvements and coordinating them with State and local programs has already been made by the National Resources Committee. Largely through its influence, planning boards have been established in 46 States, the District of Columbia and Alaska. For the first time in American history these agencies are trying to reduce isolated and frequently conflicting projects to well-rounded programs.

The value of this work was amply demonstrated in the national inventory of public works undertaken in co-operation with the PWA. So conscientiously did some of the State planning boards investigate proposed improvements that Secretary Ickes was led to comment: "I believe that the catch-as-catch-can method which ignores the necessity of national planning is a thing of the past." Since then enormous sums which might have been devoted to these valuable projects have been frittered away in boondoggling. But that only emphasizes the urgent need for more careful planning on a permanent basis, which could not be so easily ignored.

One of the most serious criticisms of the Administration is that it has undertaken enormous projects and launched numerous innovations without adequate spade work—in some cases without any clear idea of where the experiment may lead. Unfortunately, there is no assurance that a permanent National Resources Board would be more influential than the temporary one has been. Nevertheless, the creation of such an agency is an important step in the direction which this country must move if further chaos in the utilization of natural resources is to be avoided.

Forgotten Children.

Credit for first focusing attention of Congress on the National Training School for Girls, which led to the move for appropriation of $100,000 for its thorough rehabilitation, goes to the Washington members of the League of Women Voters. It was at their instance that Senators King and Copeland first inspected the institution. The latter came away remarking that he would send a girl to hell before sending her there. The league, too, was instrumental in arranging a visit by Mrs. Roosevelt to the reformatory after which she was moved to use such words as "medieval" and "barbarous."

More than merely exclaiming in shocked tones, however, at the unsavory conditions in which the District's delinquents are forced to live, Mrs. Roosevelt determined to help improve their lot. She invited them to tea. Yesterday's newspapers gave prominent display to accounts of the party, with the girls in plain cotton dresses eating ice cream and cake on the White House lawn. But, as Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, superintendent of the school, has hastened to point out, those who saw in the scene only a passing novelty arising from the unusually humble character of the guests missed the full significance of the incident.

For the wife of the President to have entertained, naturally and graciously, a group of "forgotten children" means that the cause of intelligent treatment for delinquents will be advanced further than any number of social welfare conferences could have hoped to accomplish. The moral will be missed by none—that delinquent children are not to be dismissed as objects deserving only neglect and contempt.

Mrs. Roosevelt's act of kindness does not mean that these girls should be pampered or sentimentalized. But it does mean that nothing is gained by sweeping dust under the bed. In the long run society only cheats itself when it coops up 81 girls in dark, wooden cell blocks and tries to forget them.

A Maritime Probe Needed.

The riots of last week in which striking seamen battled with the New York police are the latest episodes in a long series of more or less violent disturbances which are bringing the American merchant marine into disrepute at home and abroad. Reported mutinies at sea and bloody clashes ashore cannot be dismissed as the work of outlaw unions or the insidious machinations of communistic agitators. The inability of conservative unions to hold their membership in line and the susceptibility of crews to radical propaganda are manifestations of growing unrest which requires more searching examination.

The dilatory and ineffective way in which this problem is being handled is indefensible in face of the grave disorders that have arisen. The National Committee on Safety at Sea is handicapped in its study of the subject because it has no power to subpena witnesses and no funds at its disposal. A senatorial sub-committee of inquiry authorized over a year ago, has yet to be appointed, while an interdepartmental committee organized for investigative purposes has not begun to function.

As pointed out by Howard S. Cullman, vice chairman of the National Committee on Safety at Sea, the entire maritime labor situation should be surveyed at once, "not by a 'whitewashing committee,' but by a joint group, representing labor, shipowners, the Government and the public." The controversy between the operators and the crews of American vessels cannot be handled like ordinary labor disturbances, for the safety of passengers is at stake.

There should be an impartial investigation of the wages, hours and living conditions to determine whether striking seamen have legitimate cause of complaint. An attempt should also be made to discover and correct the conditions responsible for the extraordinarily heavy crew turnover which interferes with the maintenance of a trained and disciplined personnel.

Above all else, it is essential to restore discipline and to see that it is preserved. Safety of life at sea depends to a large extent upon the efficiency and morale of crews. That has been proved on too many occasions in the recent past, when passengers on American merchant vessels have lost their lives because of failure of man power rather than inadequacy of safety devices.

The Federal Government is not called upon to assume full responsibility, of course, for the correction of evils that grow out of the mistakes of private management or the indiscretions of organized labor. But it should take prompt steps to correct those defects in our laws and regulations that play into the hands of irresponsible shipowners and demoralize ships' crews. It is alleged, for example, that nearly 50 per cent of the discharge certificates in circulation today are either fraudulent or incomplete, permitting entry into the service of entirely unqualified and untrained men posing as "able" seamen.

The National Committee on Safety at Sea believes that "until an adequate personnel, thoroughly trained and responsible, can be assured, true safety at sea is impossible. From this point of view, the riotous demonstrations in New York and elsewhere take on a significance that transcends the immediate causes of conflict.

There are times when one wishes that Queen Isabella had been fonder of jewels.

The Careful Critic.

Paul Elmer More in the American Review.

I should say that nothing today is more needed than steady adherence to the middle of the road and the focusing of attention on centrality. Nor is such a method to be confused with the commonplace born of inability to think or with timidity of soul; it in no wise falls under the charge of Prince Hal to Poins: "Thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks; never a man's thought in the world keeps the roadway better than thine." It is rather that broad wisdom of common sense, based on experience of life and on familiarity with the solid achievements of the past, which enables the possessor to retain his sanity of taste against the eccentricities of critics, sometimes of high standing, who value subtlety and originality above the accepted canons of judgment.

"The truth is," as John Bailey says, referring to the absurd theories promulgated about some of Shakespeare's characters, "that such observations of criticism come from incapacity to endure the humiliation of seeing with all men's eyes, or telling a truth which has been told before."

Flagmen At Crossings?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The danger to pedestrians from autos is no longer confined to thoroughfares. With the increasing number of parking lots and service stations, the sidewalks near such places are danger zones.

Machines back across, their drivers unable to see where they are going. A week ago a man was killed by being backed into by a bus. Cars go across the pavements in every direction.

It is suggested that regulations be framed requiring that a flagman be provided at each of these danger spots.

"Eat This And Like It."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that local parks have been cleaned up by the Commissioners, and Ethiopia mopped up by Mussolini, it seems highly fitting, by one who has diligently followed the spectacular progress of both, to call attention to striking similarities in objectives and methods.

The Lord High Commissioner of the glory that is to be Rome assured all spectators at the outset that the world would like his rejuvenation job when finished—face-lifting, permanent, and all. Such assurance came also from the Park and Planning Commissioners, who have improved upon beauty-specialist technique by producing a permanent face-lift.

In defense of their activities, the excuses offered by both bands of depredators, with that care-freeness known only by those not up for re-election, might be resolved into the words of the mother's command to the small child back in the halcyon days of spinach: "You'll eat this, and you'll like it, too!"

The Orchestra Personnel.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is an undeniable fact that the personnel of the orchestra constitutes the National Symphony Orchestra, and not the National Symphony Association. Mr. Kindler is not the orchestra, neither is Mr. Cappel, Mr. Gaul nor Mrs. Howe. At the time Mr. Kindler appeared on the scene, he was without experience or reputation as a symphony conductor, and this orchestra was the means of him gaining considerable of both. If he has been successful, and in my opinion he still has a long way to go, certainly he will not object to giving some credit to the men and the organization making it possible.

Mr. Kindler has expressed dissatisfaction with local musicians, has replaced them with musicians brought from out of town, only to discard his own importees at the end of the season and to again importune the union to permit him to replace the men he himself imported.

Consequently the number of musicians available in this jurisdiction was constantly being increased, with the amount of work for them to do getting less and less. Hence the action of the union (nationally, not locally) restricting these imported men from competing with local musicians for local work. I am impressed with the thought of that, in developing a symphony orchestra, it might be better to keep the same personnel from season to season, and to develop them into as perfect an ensemble as possible, rather than each season to discard and replace a large percentage.

Under Mr. Kindler's system, there has been, and we can presume will continue to be, a 20 per cent turnover in the orchestra personnel each season, each season seeing some Washington men being replaced by graduates from the Curtis Institute of Philadelphia, the Eastman School of Rochester and other musical institutes. What is Mr. Kindler's affection for these out-of-town institutions that he seeks to make the National Symphony Orchestra a training ground for these youngsters? If this is to be the system, if the people of Washington are supposed to support what is purported to be a Washington orchestra, why not, when all is said and done, give these opportunities to local musical graduates?

Two Views On Italy's Conquest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One who has hoped much from the League of Nations asks how it can further international good will to hurt Italy.

While Ethiopia functioned in a responsible way, there was reason in recognizing it, but today it is under the Italian flag, a part of that Italy which has done much for the peace of Europe and yet was forced, as it believes, to defend its colonial border and secure the collaboration once pledged to it by the Negus, but which because of the weakness of his government he was unable to command.

Hence Italy undertook the only action which promised a capable government in that territory. The League could protest Italy's action so long and only so long as there was a real African state from which something worthy might be hoped. Italy has expugned that state and offers its people a more competent rule than they have ever enjoyed in their history.

If it is asked: Does not the recognition of Italian rule in Ethiopia mean the condoning by the League of an illegal use of force by a member state against another state in the League, we say, "no, since combat has ceased and the state once ruled by the Negus no more exists."

But should not Italy suffer? It has suffered and still suffers from the application of League sanctions. Can their longer application help either the cause of peace or righteousness or of Ethiopia? If the occasion for sanctions has passed how are their continuance in the interest of reason or of peace or of the welfare of Europe or of the League

WILLIAM E. DAVENPORT.
Secretary, the Italian settlement.
Brooklyn, N. Y., May 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Prime Minister Baldwin would reorganize the League for war instead of peace. Any change would be an improvement—but would that be a change? It is just through helping win the one war that is a standing challenge as the most barbarous and unprovoked campaign of murder in all history.

If it isn't a League for war now, then what is it? It is even more provocative of war, and protective of belligerent aggressors that bulldoze it, than any avowed war League could be. Though Minister Baldwin is right in advocating armed attack upon violator members, it will probably be a very cold day in September when Uncle Sam joins it.

Dictators it is said can never stand still. It is an even bet that Mussolini will, in order to glorify and make more worthwhile the title of King Victor of Ethiopia, eventually strive to acquire all French and English Ethiopia; Rhodesia could contribute many gems for his crown.

He should first, however, do some field work himself, and by the grace of God or world compulsion be made to head a scavenger squad to shoo off the vultures and jackals from that buzzard feast he spread, no stench from which assailed his pride-distended nostrils in his victory speech on that distant palace balcony; gather up and give decent burial in native soil to those bones, of that fragment of a prehistoric race.

Basis For Measuring Tax.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From the press I gather, advocates of the tax on undistributed net income assume the basis should be the "ratio of undistributed to total net income." From today's papers, it is observed that no less an authority than Prof. Sprague, of Harvard, also assumes this base but offers the suggestion that there be granted an exemption of 25 per cent of the total net income.

The purpose of this letter is to take exception not to the tax (including continuance of the present corporation income tax) but to the base of this surtax, namely, "the ratio of undistributed to total net income."

The purpose of the proposed bill was to place a tax on "hoarding corporate income" as a means of tax avoidance.

To determine whether a corporation is "hoarding" or merely exercising business prudence, recourse must be had to its cash position—the ratio of its current assets to its current liabilities. Where these show a ratio of 1½ to 1 or less, a corporation may be justified in distributing none of its net income and to place a tax thereon would constitute not a "tax on hoarding" but a "tax on prudence."

I therefore offer for consideration that the tax on undistributed net income (a) be based upon the ratio of the corporation's current assets to current liabilities; (b) be applied on a graduated scale proportionate to the foregoing ratio, and (c) be exempted from corporations with a ratio of less than 2 to 1.

Georgists And Townsendites.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It puzzles people why the Henry George idea has never gotten anywhere in America. The single tax on land values is sound in principle and simple in operation. Millions of men have accepted it, and the list includes many rich and influential citizens.

Your old hide-bound single taxer is a "doctrinaire," and his one idea sets him up far above the realities of humanity. "Come to my office and I will tell you just what the world needs," says the Georgist, but the voters have no idea of calling on a feller who doesn't even speak their language.

Karl Marx said that "only by class struggle and class consciousness can any party reach the people." The body of the people cannot think. They feel things. He can only be reached by stirring his prejudices, his hate, his desire. You can flatter his vanity, offer him full dinner pails and a garage with a car, and he will vote for the best "promiser," but it is always a vote against somebody.

The Sermon on the Mount and the Golden Rule, having no class appeal or profit motive, get the same attention that the single tax does. It's too good to be true! Every principle of morality and intelligence leads us to "tax reform," and yet more taxes are loaded on, and Henry George is forgotten because his message is not interpreted in terms of humanity.

Democracy is the safe middle road of compromise, but the world now walks either on the Fascist path or in the Communist jungle. The Georgists must compromise in order to reach the people. If the Townsend Plan, with its human appeal, was combined with the cold logic of Henry George, the whole plane of life would rise. The tax on land values is the only just tax, and it will be the gold mine for the Townsend Plan.

Tax Incoherence.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations are due Elderman for his timely cartoons and titles.

In your issue of May 12 "For the Paperweight Championship" is clever to the nth degree; for the tax bill runs over nearly 300 pages of unrelated and incoherent plans that have never had their equal in our taxation history, since the income tax measure in 1913-14.

My memory is that certain phrases in that bill (before it became an act) could not even be clarified by the author, Cordell Hull.

One of Those Ageless Women

Post Office, Monday.

After all, we needn't have worried because a few envious scholars attempted to cast doubts upon the historic reality of Helen of Troy. Our mere mention of those pundits' conduct has brought forth abundant evidence, not only of the fact that Helen did live, but that she refuses to expire.

Our correspondents keep her very much alive.

* * *

We regret, however, one turn that their letters have taken. They are beginning to indulge, regarding the spouse of Menelaus, speculations that, at least according to the tradition of a more polite day than ours, no gentleman should indulge when they concern a lady. Had the King of Sparta survived as long as his wife, these speculations would start another Trojan War.

* * *

A typical example is provided by M. J. Fortie, who lives on the periphery of Logan Circle, but who, we hear from our secret service, is not unconnected with the World Federation of Education Associations. This epistle begins:

"How old is Helen—your Helen, my Helen, or that symphony in blue whom old Tom ogled on the Takoma car last Wednesday?

"Only Helen knows!"

* * *

And then, voyaging to Scandinavia, the writer becomes more specific:

"An anonymous Swede, however, knows positively how old Helen of Troy was when this and that happened to her—and to others. His calculations are simple and seem convincing.

"Helen and Clytaemnestra were twin sisters. Clytaemnestra married Agememnon and had three children. One of these children was Iphigenia.

"Now, before leaving home for Troy to serve in Helen's own private war, Agamemnon offered Iphigenia, then a young woman, as a sacrifice to the gods of Olympus. Anybody familiar with classic history will recall these data—and recall that they are undisputed.

* * *

"Well," M. J. F. continues, "our Swede plausibly assumes that the term 'young woman' should imply a person of about 20 years of age. He deduces, from this premise, the fact that Clytaemnestra must have been fair and 40 when the Trojan War began."

* * *

Thus to the conclusion of the Swedish syllogism:

"Therefore Helen, Clytaemnestra's twin sister, must have also reached 40 about the time she eloped with Paris and started the war. And, since the war lasted 10 years, Helen must have been not much less than 50 when Menelaus took her back to Sparta and had a second honeymoon."

* * *

Magnanimous Menelaus!

* * *

"My Helen," concludes M. J. Fortie, "wants to find the Beauty Shoppe that sent the bills to Menelaus."

* * *

Magnanimous, that is, if the Swede's reasoning is correct. In that case, we don't wonder at the curiosity of Mr. Fortie's Helen.

However, is the Swede's reasoning correct?

* * *

Scandinavia is not a promising place in which to seek for the truth about the love-affairs of the Balkan Peninsula or the jealousies of Asia Minor. The next thing we know, Stockholm will be asked by the League of Nations (and Duce Mussolini) to accept a mandate over the new Ethiopian Empire.

Why does Mr. Fortie go all the way to Sweden, when he could dial the Near Eastern Division of the United States' State Department?

* * *

In the second place, we have discovered the Beauty Parlor responsible for the conservation of Trojan Helen's charms—and its discovery accounts for everything else:

It is presided over by Aphrodite.

It is owned by Zeus.

* * *

Wasn't Zeus the father of Helen?

Wouldn't it be just like him to endow her with eternal youth?

* * *

Well, he did, anyhow.

* * *

Aside from which, this columnist, as already intimated, objects to all inquiries into ladies' ages. What though the ladies who write their autobiographies for "Who's Who in America" now take a barbarous pride in publishing their birthdays? More and more men contributors to that invaluable book of reference are pursuing an opposite course.

The age of a lady is nobody's business but her own.

Arithmetic Lesson.

From the Des Moines Register.

The woman who, as a widow of a World War Veteran, will receive the last pension check to be paid for that war, if we go in for general pensions by and by, is probably not yet born.

Death has just claimed the last surviving widow of a veteran of the War of 1812.

On the basis of the figures just cited the last surviving widow of a World War veteran will die in the year 2041, a lapse of 124 years after the United States entered that war and still 105 years in the future.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

"Mrs. Harriet Hague, of Worcester, Mass., 86 years of age, was a passenger on the flight of the Zeppeline Hindenburg from Lakehurst back to Germany. 'I'm an old hand at aviation,' she said. 'I've been flying since I was 80.'"—News item.

"Mrs. Hague will have to take a back seat to Grandma Twitchell," said Elmer Twitchell today. "She was offered a free trip both ways in the Hindenburg, but turned it down as old stuff to her. Known as 'The Flying Grandma,' she is 112 years old this year as has been an air addict since she was knee-high to a hangar."

* * * *

"Grandma Twitchell was an accomplished county fair stunt balloonist at the age of 50, and at 65 she had achieved distinction as America's Number One Parachute Jumper," continued Elmer. "She would jump out of anything from a hotel window or a box at the opera to a stratosphere baloon or an Einstein lecture.

* * * *

"She was with Wellman on the first attempt to cross the Atlantic by bag. In fact, when the Wellman balloon went screwy a few hundred miles out and Wellman signaled for a steamship to take him in tow, Grandma Twitchell staged the first dirigible mutiny by declaring herself in command and calling for volunteers to continue the flight. In the midst of her appeal her false teeth popped out and bit a hole in the bag, releasing the gas. But for that she would have gone on, even if it had to be alone.

* * * *

"She was a dirigible fanatic. She had bags on the brain; in fact, you could see bags under her eyes. After the Wellman fiasco she explained to me that when she saw the chances of the balloon being the first bag to take a woman across the Atlantic she had wanted to be the first woman to take a bag across. Her ambition was to write a book, 'Around the World by Bag and Life Preserver.'

* * *

"Promenade decks! Why, Grandma Twitchell rode in Zeppelins when all they had was catwalks and you had to be a tight-wire expert to get from your own cabin to a washbasin. Hot showers! Why, in her day a cake of soap was a luxury. I see where one passenger complained that the mirrors were inadequate. Grandma used to fix her hair by looking at her reflection in a basin of ballast water!

* * *

"I got a letter from her yesterday. She says she supposes the Zeps will have polo fields, golf courses, swimming pools and tennis courts next. And she says she hopes they go in for archery, the big sissies!"

Sentimental Journey.

I must go down to the sea again,
To the lonely sea and the sky.
And I only hope when I get there, lads,
The scows won't be going by!

Colloids And Truth

By William Lyon Phelps.

Manual Of Wisdom.

I am grateful to Mr. Paul Wozencraft, of Cincinnati, for calling my attention to Dr. Martin H. Fischer's new translation of a Spanish classic, Dr. Martin Fischer, of the Medical College of the University of Cincinnati, received a pleasant surprise on the occasion of his closing lecture of the semester this last February.

An excellent account of the event appeared in the Cincinnati Times-Star. It seems that Prof Fischer had completed 25 years of service as professor of physiology, although he had himself forgotten all about it, and did not realize that the occasion had any particular significance. But his second year class, with Ray Nulsen as spokesman, presented him a silver bowl.

* * * *

Dr. Fischer has been awarded the gold medal for research by the American Medical Association, the Hatfield and Cartwright prizes, and an international prize for work in colloids, although I do not know what a colloid is, never having seen one.

But Dr. Fischer, like some other first-class physicians, is a teacher, a philosopher, an artist, and a man of unusual literary culture. He has made a new English translation of a Spanish book written in the seventeenth century by Baltasar Graeian. I have not seen this work, but the English title is "A Truth-telling Manual and the Art of Worldly Wisdom," and the following extract from it is so interesting that it has cost me $3, for I have just sent for the book.

* * * *

It is published by Charles C. Thomas, of Springfield, Ill., and $3 is the price. Here is the extract:

"Everything today has its point, but the art of making yourself count for something the greatest: more is demanded to produce one wise man today, than seven formerly; and more is needed to deal with a single individual in our times, than with a whole people in the past.

"Mind and spirit. The two poles upon which rest the firmament of our faculties: the one without the other, a happiness by half: mind is not enough, spirit is necessary. The lot of a fool, to fail in his calling, professional, commercial, political, social.

The Fear Of Germany

Not Military Strengh But Alignment of Europe Seen To Hold Secret Of Whether Hitler Will Follow Mussolini Into War.

The Post presents the first installment of a history and interpretation of present world events by an authority on current affairs. The articles are based largely on a more detailed study by the author, "The Dangerous Year," published by the Foreign Policy Association, New York City.

By Raymond Leslie Buell,
President of The Foreign Policy Association.

TODAY three great powers are on the march. No one is certain how far they may go, or how to meet their demands. Should the "haves" come to terms with the "have nots," or should they attempt to stop expansion by force? This fundamental question remains unanswered. Meanwhile, the world resounds with the tread of armed men and gloomy predictions of new wars and social convulsions.

During the early weeks of 1935 events seemed to belie these pessimistic prophecies. The Saar was peacefully returned to Germany after a plebiscite held under the auspices of an international police force and an electoral commission appointed by the League of Nations. The League also proved its usefulness in settling by peaceful means a dispute between Yugoslavia and Hungary over the assassination of King Alexander at Marseilles. In February, France and Britain urged Germany to come back to the League, which it had left in 1933, in return for an air guarantee pact and an armament agreement accepting the principle of equality.

Despite these superficial improvements, the economic condition of Europe was less promising than in the early months of 1934. The fifth year of the depression found the world still bound by the chains of economic nationalism, lacking the political confidence necessary for economic recovery on an international scale.

Hitler's First Shot Fired In March, 1935.

IN MARCH, 1935, Hitler fired the first shot in an invisible world war. It took the form of an announcement that, notwithstanding the restrictions of the Versailles Treaty, Germany would return to the policy of conscription and build up an army of 53 divisions totaling about 600,000—a force considerably larger than that maintained in Europe by France. In May he declared that Germany also intended to establish an air force equal to that of any other power, and a navy 35 per cent the strength of the British fleet.

Germany's announced intention to rearm in defiance of treaty obligations shocked the world. But the League was not sufficiently shocked to do anything more than pass a resolution of protest. Germany had not yet gone to war, but the French public was reluctant to support a new occupation of the Rhine. The British, meanwhile, seemed to feel that Germany would accept an agreement restricting armaments, if only France did not block the way. Hitler thus succeeded in defying the outside world; and Germany gained new confidence in itself. By its own will it had achieved a position of equality in Europe denied to it by the Allies.

Hitler fired his second shot when, on March 7, 1936, he suddenly ordered 20,000 German troops to march into the Rhineland, which had been demilitarized by the Treaty of Versailles. These provisions with respect to the Rhine had been reaffirmed in the Locarno Pact of 1925, in which Germany, France, Britain, Italy and Belgium solemnly promised not to resort to war against each other except in self-defense. Hitler justified the abrogation of this agreement along with the demilitarized zone on the ground that France had concluded an alliance with Soviet Russia.

While taking this high-handed action, Hitler offered to make a new peace treaty with the rest of Europe, under which Germany would come back to the League. Despite feverish negotiations, no action was taken to prevent this further violation of treaties by Hitler. The League was already attempting to combat Mussolini in Ethiopia; and it could not attempt to discipline two dictators at a time. Having won a further victory, Hitler may now be encouraged to take advantage of Europe's distress by seizing Austria or inciting the Germans of Czechoslovakia to revolt. Such is the fear which today dominates Europe.

Nazis Declare Army Is Only For Defense.

ALTHOUGH Germans insist that the new army is only for defense, and Hitler publicly opposes the use of force to alter frontiers, the world fears that German aggression is sooner or later inevitable. The program of the Nazi Party and Hitler's autobiography, "Mein Kampf," demand the union of all Germans in one Great Germany, and the acquisition of "land and territory sufficient to feed our people." Should this demand be literally carried out, it might mean the absorption of Austria, the Southern Tyrol, Memel and Danzig, and parts of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Belgium, Holland, the Scandinavian countries and Switzerland. In addition to advancing this demand for racial unity, the Nazis preach that Soviet communism is the deadly enemy of Germany, and that Soviet territory should be seized as an outlet for surplus German population.

Despite frequent professions of peace after he came to power, Hitler continues to denounce the Soviet Union; and it is not unnatural for Moscow to believe that he is psychologically preparing his followers for an offensive against the U. S. S. R.

One reason for war may be provided by growing economic and finacial difficulties. The economic and social policy adopted by the Nazi regime has certain commendable features. For example, unemployment was reduced in two years from 6,000,000 to 1,700,000 in August, 1935, and industrial production shows marked gains. But these achievements are partly due to heavy government expenditures for public works and rearmament. Since it is impossible to finance these activities from current revenue, the government has adopted a borrowing policy. The figures of the floating debt are not published; but experts believe that in addition to the funded debt Germany has contracted a "secret" floating debt of between 10,000,000,000 and 15,000,000,000 marks.

Germany's borrowing power has been improved by the success of Dr. Schacht, the financial dictator, in halving the foreign debt since 1930. Nevertheless, experts believe that the German capitalist system cannot absorb a total floating debt of more than 25,000,000,000 marks, and that at the present rate of expenditure this figure may be reached within two or three years. These predictions may prove unduly conservative: many governments during the depression have successfully defied the maxims of the economists. But obviously there is a limit to the German debt capacity. And the regime frankly admits that its whole policy is to gamble on an economic revival within the next few years.

Should economic recovery come to Germany by 1940, Hitler and Schacht might be saved. But if recovery fails to come, what will happen? Rearmament will be completed and it will be necessary to find new jobs for the workers and the younger generation. Yet government credit will be exhausted. Will the Nazis then turn to runaway inflation, debt repudiation, nationalization of industries or a foreign war? All of these courses remain open, and the adoption of some of them seems probable.

Hitler May Resort To Duce's Strategies.

GERMANY, of course, may remain at peace indefinitely if the people are willing to accept a constantly decreasing standard of living. But the Nazis have promised miracles, and if they fail to fulfill their promises they may be obliged to plunge the country into war in order to retain power. Will Hitler follow Mussolini's example?

Despite this danger, there is general agreement that Germany will not be ready to wage war for several years. The manufacture of material, the training of non-commissioned personnel, and the building up of a real body of reserves, all take a certain period of time. It is also evident that even when preparations are technically complete, Germany will not fight unless it has a good chance of victory. Neither the Reischwehr nor the Nazi regime could survive a defeat like that of 1918.

Whether Germany resorts to war in Europe depends therefore not only on its internal military strength but on the diplomatic situation. A coalition of the 25 other European states would make German victory impossible. In the absence of such a coalition, Germany stands a good chance of success.

If it could count on the assistance of an anti-Soviet bloc composed of Poland, Finland, Hungary and Italy, and rely on British neutrality, Nazi Germany might win the next European war.

Supreme Court May Rule Today On Coal Control

Tribunal Also May Return Opinion on Municipal Bankruptcy Act.

By the Associated Press.

The constitutionality of two New Deal laws—the Guffey coal control and the municipal bankruptcy acts—may be decided today by the Supreme Court.

Re-assembling after a two-week recess, the nine justices also are expected to announce whether they will pass on the legality of PWA loans for publicly-owned hydro-electric projects. If they agree, a final ruling, however, will be deferred until next fall.

Principal interest centers on the long-awaited Guffey decision, involving price fixing and regulation of wages and hours in the soft coal industry. The case has been under consideration longer than any other New Deal dispute.

Arguments were completed March 12. Hence 67 days will have elapsed today. The TVA case required 60 days. The gold case took 40 days, AAA, 28 and NRA, 24.

Attorneys said the justices may have had difficulties in agreeing on a decision, or they may have had trouble phrasing the opinion to suit a majority. The record is so columinous and the legal points so complex that attorneys have predicted all along that considerable time would be required for the opinion.

In a case brought by James Walter Carter, West Virginia and Virginia coal producer, the District of Columbia Supreme Court upheld price fixing, but declared unconstitutional provisions for regulating wages and hours.

A decision upholding the act in its entirety was handed down by the Western Kentucky Federal District Court in passing on another case filed by Kentucky operators.

The cases were consolidated in the Supreme Court.

The municipal bankruptcy act—intended to aid cities, counties and other political subdivisions reduce their indebtedness through Federal bankruptcy courts—was challenged by certain bondholders of the Cameron County, Tex., Water Improvement District, No. 1. It was upheld by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

PWA loans were assailed by the Duke Power Co. in protesting a $2,852,000 loan and grant to Greenwood County, S. C., for a power project at Buzzard Roost. The Circuit Court of Appeals at Charlotte, N. C., ruled in favor of the Government. That decision will remain in effect should the Supreme Court deny a review.

Other possible rulings today involve the New York minimum wage law for women and children, the Government's effort to bar Arthur W. Cutten, Chicago trader, from the Nation's grain markets for two years, Alabama's effort to tax gasoline sold the Federal Government by the Texas Co., and Indiana law to regulate installment sales on purchases under $1,500, and the attempt by Secretary Henry A. Wallace to reduce charges for buying and selling livestock at the Chicago and Kansas City stockyards.

Twenty-six cases have been argued and will be decided before the court adjourns for the summer on June 1. Rulings not forthcoming today will be announced on one of the two following Mondays.

Guatemala Cites League's Failure

Geneva, May 17 (AP).—The government of Guatemala in a cable explaining its decision to resign from the League of Nations said today the League had failed to achieve its high ideals.

Dr. Joseph A. C. Avenol, secretary general of the League, received a direct message from the government stating that the withdrawal was "due to economic reasons imposed by a reorganization of public finances and the fact events have demonstrated the impossibility of realizing the high ideals entertained at the time when the League was founded."

The cable added that Guatemala does not wish to evade payment of her dues and said the action was not connected with current world politics. This was considered a denial of assertions made by League officials that Italy had influenced the decision of the Latin-American country.

Curfew Order Follows Riots At Jerusalem

Citizens Forbidden to Use Streets at Night After Killing of 3 More.

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, May 17.—Citizens were forbidden to walk the streets of Jerusalem at night in an unprecedented curfew imposed by the government today, the Palcor News Agency reported.

The government took the step in an effort to cope with panic that seized the Holy City as a result of the killing of three Jews and the wounding of two others in front of a theater here last night.

All traffic and use of the streets was banned between the hours of 8 p. m. and 6 a. m.

An Arab civil disobedience general strike is now in progress in protest against continued Jewish immigration. The Palcor agency said it was learned that Sir Arthur Wauchope, high commissioner for Palestine, has categorically rejected the Arab demand for termination of the Jewish immigration.

The Jewish community turned out in vast thousands this morning to accompany the funeral procession of three slain Jews to the Mount of Olives Cemetery. All shops in the city closed and Jews suspended work in mourning for the three victims of assassins' bullets.

Toll Placed at 38.

According to police figures available, the disturbances which started at Jaffa on April 19 have brought about the death of 23 Jews and of 15 Arabs, killed by police fire.

Isaac Jalowski, one of the three murdered, was 27 years old and was married six weeks ago. Dr. Zvi Spachowski, the second, came to Palestine from Poland a few months ago with a wife who is an expectant mother. The third was Alexander Polonski, 23, a student from Poland at the School of Oriental Studies of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

Three bombs were exploded in Safed, one near the police station, another at the postoffice and the third near a Jewish hotel. No damage was done.

A strong detachment of troops was dispatched to Safed to patrol all sections of the city, where many Jews were killed by Arabs in the 1929 riots.

Shots Fired at Colonists.

Jewish colonists assembled in the dining hall of the Plugath Hakibbutz Hameuchad, a settlement near Herzlia, were the targets for 15 rifle shots last night, but none of them was injured.

In an effort to impress natives with the strength of the British army, infantry troops, accompanied by tanks, marched through various parts of Palestine, the Palcor agency reported.

Machine guns were placed at every strategic point in Jerusalem. Not since the British occupation has the city been patrolled by such strong military forces.

In the face of the increasingly tense situation Sir Arthur Wauchope, high commissioner for Palestine, summoned an urgent conference of government officials to discuss measures to be taken to prevent a spread of disorders.

Soldiers and police were guarding all roads and searching any suspects for arms.

clared, as he was hustled away to a waiting taxicab by several executives of the organization who explained that "the doctor is too tired to talk now."

Two weeks ago when Dr. Townsend was originally scheduled to testify before the committee, the hearing was called off virtually at the last minute to give the committee investigators "more time to get a lot of information from the Coast."

Before Dr. Townsend was driven off to his hotel, he hastily scrawled his signature to a lease for the organization's new national headquarters to be set up in the Central Life Building in Chicago, Ill. The lease was flown back to Chicago last night by J. B. Kiefer, central regional director and a member of the National Board.

Lease to Run a Year.

"The lease will run just as long as it will take us to get the Townsend plan enacted into law," replied Kiefer when asked about its terms.

From confidental sources it was learned the lease runs for a year and involves a rental payment of $1,500. The transfer of the national headquarters from this city to Chicago is scheduled to take place June 1.

Asked whether he intended to see any members of Congress today, Dr. Townsend shook his head. Kiefer, with him at the time, remarked laughingly, "the Doctor doesn't have to go to see Congressmen. They come to him."

For almost two hours the more than 100 members of the caravan stood massed before the Grant Memorial listening to their leader. Ralph Lepine, of Los Angeles, and Miss Johnson tell news reel cameramen of their 3,000 mile trip across the country.

Traveled 3,000 Miles.

"We have traveled 3,000 miles and endured hardships to bring to you the signatures of 10,581,000 persons who insist that the Townsend Plan be enacted into law," Miss Johnson said. "Our trip was tiring, but the Townsend spirit was our pick-me-up."

"I think this is wonderful," said Tolan, taking the petition. "I will present the petition to our committee when it convenes on Tuesday."

Lepine reported that the caravan passed safely through three sandstorms and two heavy rainstorms, and that official police patrols had escorted them since their departure from California until their arrival in Washington.

The permit for the group to use the Grant Memorial site was given them at the request of the Townsend National Headquarters by Frank T. Gartside, assistant superintendent of the National Capital Parks. The caravan is expected to remain quartered in the city as long as the Investigating Committee is in session.

Townsend was subpenaed to appear before the committee on April 22, following the testimony of Robert E. Clements, cofounder of the plan, that he had received $75,000 from the Old Age Revolving Pensions, Inc., and the Townsend Weekly in a little more than two years. Clements, formerly secretary and treasurer of the organization, quit that post on the eve of the opening of the committee's hearings.

Gold Imports Have Resumed, Board Reports

$125,000,000 of $150,000,000 During Month Came From France.

The flow of gold into the United States from abroad has been resumed, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday. From the middle of April to May 8, the board said, imports of gold totaled $150,000,000 of which $125,000,000 came from France, the board said.

"Gold movements to this country, which had practically ceased at the beginning of this year, were resumed on a considerable scale in the last week of April," the statement said.

In the early part of the year imports were smaller than for any similar period since January, 1934. This, the board said, was mainly due to a reduction in the volume of European short-term balances held in the American market.

"The reduction in European short-term balances held in this country appears in its earlier stages to have reflected in part the gradual subsidence of the war fears that had initiated the transfer of British and other balances to this market in September and October, and in part the passing of the acute fiscal and political issues in France which had come to a crisis in November," the statement continued.

"When capital again began to leave France in the latter part of January, it was transferred to England rather than to the United States.

"The anticipated effect on the budget of legislation for adjusted service compensation and of the court decision invalidating taxes imposed in connection with the agricultural adjustment program, together with the President's power to devalue the dollar, created some uncertainty abroad as to the course of the American monetary policy, and the slow reduction of European balances in this country continued."

By the latter part of March, the board said, foreign uncertainty in regard to the monetary policies of this country had lost much of its force, and the inward flow of gold began.

4 New Bishops Of Methodists Assume Office

Conference Prepares to Adjourn; Posts Will Be Assigned.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, May 17.—The quadrennial conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church consecrated four newly elected bishops in an impressive ceremony today and elevated them to seats on the board of bishops.

They were Wilbur E. Hammaker, for 27 years pastor of a Youngstown, Ohio, church; Charles W. Flint, chancellor of Syracuse, N. Y., University; G. Bromley Oxnam, president of Depauw University of Greencastle, Ind., and Alexander P. Shaw, of New Orleans, Negro successor to Bishop Matthew W. Clair, of Covington, Ky.

At the same time the conference consecrated missionary bishop John M. Springer, of Elizabethville, Belgian Congo, elected to serve in Africa, and Central Conference Bishop Roberto Elphick, of Santiago, Chile, chosen several months ago to represent the South American Central Conference.

The committee on Episcopacy was expected to make its recommendation on assignment of all bishops for the next four years at Monday's conference session.

With the completion of the committee reports, the assignment of bishops, and the election of the church editors to be approved, delegates prepared to hold three business sessions of the conference tomorrow in an effort to adjourn by noon Tuesday.

Henry Hull in 'Tobacco Road' Scores Again

Grim Drama Returns for Week at National With Original Cast.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"TOBACCO ROAD." Jack Kirkland and Sam H. Grisman present the play in three acts by Jack Kirkland, based on the novel of the same name by Erskine Caldwell. Return engagement, opening Sunday night, in the National Theater.

THE CAST.

Dude Lester .....Donald Barry
Ada Lester .....Mary Servoss
Jeeter Lester .....MR. HULL
Ellie May .....Pauline Drake
Grandma Lester .....Hallene Hill
Lov Bensey .....Leon Ames
Henry Peabody .....Dick Lee
Sister Bessie Rice .....Priscilla Knowles
Pearl .....Halla Stoddard
Captain Tim .....Howard Banks
George Payne .....Fiske O'Hara

Again illuminating its pitiful canvas with broad and vivid strokes, Jack Kirkland's gripping and slightly shocking picture of all that is sordid, sensuous and depraved in the primitive backwoods life of Georgia—and all the rest of underprivileged, backwoods America, for that matter—reiterated its message of despair in the National Theater last night.

It is no part of the function of these remarks to attack or defend the premise upon which Erskine Caldwell, author of the original work upon which the play is founded, and Jack Kirkland, who dramatized the novel, have assailed the tenant share-cropper problem of the agricultural South. If any defense were needed, it was expressed in the columns of the New York Times a week ago yesterday, when Mr. Caldwell replied to excoriations aimed at his book and the play in the halls of Congress. To the lay observer, "Tobacco Road" remains a brutally frank and penetrating indictment of a condition that is believed actually to exist in many parts of the United States.

Has Saving Grace of Humor.

There is no equivocation in the three acts of "Tobacco Road." It moves in a direct and infallible line from a preliminary scene of penury, starvation and utter depravity to a final tragic incident that is harrowing in its revelation of the consequences of a mode of life made banal, bestial and callous to every normal human impulse by hunger and want.

With all its candid exposition of an intolerable condition, however, the three acts of this controversial and courageous drama are not wholly dedicated to the somber aspects of an unbelievably squalid existence. There is a crude but contagious quality of humor, pathetic in its feeble heroism, threading even the most lugubrious periods of the play. While this gracious relief from the stark implications of the drama's major movement centers in the character of Jeeter Lester, it extends in greater or less degree to every member of the cast, creating an odd balance of comedy and tragedy that lends the three acts a peculiarly vital and irresistible appeal.

Without the scarecrow figure of Jeeter Lester, liar, thief, libertine and all-around rascal daddy of 17 children, the dramatic structure of "Tobacco Road" would collapse. With Henry Hull continuing in the role of the horrendous countryman he created, it assumes the proportions of a monumental milepost in the history of earthy drama.

Cast Is Grimly Realistic.

Not only does Mr. Hull assume the lineaments of greatness in this performance, but by the brilliance of his work lights the way for others in the cast to acquit themselves with honor and just a bit of reflected glory.

Among the foremost in the supporting ensemble are Mary Servoss, a perfect symbol of tragic woe; Donald Barry, as Dude Lester; Priscilla Knowles, in the role of the opportunist missionary, who sets her cap for a halfwit groom, whom she wins with a money bribe and a shiny new motor car; Leon Ames, as Lov Bensey, and Pauline Drake, in the ghastly role of Ellie May, bartered by her father for a sack of turnips and a side of salt pork!

All of the additional players whose names are recited in the small-type paragraph preceding these comments add to the poignancy of a grimly realistic commentary on a phase of modern life that is less a casual entertainment than it is an unforgettable experience in the theater.

"OF HUMAN BONDAGE." RKO-Radio picturization of the story by W. Somerset Maugham, adapted to the screen by Lester Cohen, starring Leslie Howard, with Bette Davis, Frances Dee, Kay Johnson, Reginald Denny, Alan Hale, Reginald Owen, Desmond Roberts and Reginald Sheffield. Directed by John Cromwell. A revival.

In this perhaps best-known and most applauded of his novels, W. Somerset Maughan adopted somber dramatic symbols to appeal to the tenderest of the human emotions and sympathies. He made of his hero, a crippled idealist and dreamer of utmost sensitiveness; of his leading feminine character, a crass, vindictive and conscienceless hussy of indiscriminate loves, who made of Phillip Carey a refuge in the stormiest moments of her life, regardless of the effect her perfidy had upon her patient benefactor.

'Of Human Bondage," it may be gathered—if it isn't already remembered—is not a gay and irresponsible film play. It is a dramatic treatise upon life, pitched in a minor key and dealing with the deeper of the human emotions. It is a picture which affords particularly effective roles for both of its featured players. Leslie Howard is the sensitively constituted Carey to the life, and Bette Davis, in the role of Mildred, the malignant waitress, here performs so admirably that this should have been the characterization rewarded by the Academy's golden statuette, instead of her portrayal in "Dangerous."

The supporting cast is a notable one, led by the talented players named in the brief summary of productional data preceding these admonitory paragraphs that here is a picture that had better be seen in its revival at the Little Theater, if it has not already been viewed and kept fresh in memory.

The supplementary short-reel subjects are as noteworthy as the feature. Walt Disney's 'Three Little Pigs" and its sequel, 'The Big Bad Wolf," are probably as significant a brace of superlative, natural-color, cartoon comedies as ever found their way to the screen. They were a riot on Ninth street again yesterday.

About The Showshops

IT IS not surprising that John Boles is scoring the most substantial personal triumph he ever has achieved in the National Capital—and he has appeared here several times in the last six or eight years—in his current week of personal appearances as headliner of the vaudeville portion of the bill at Loew's Fox Theater. His song numbers have been chosen with a fine eye and ear to audience appeal and the best possible display of the wide range and splendid quality of his highly cultivated voice.

BELL.

As has been numerously remarked since his first performance last Friday, here is an act out of Hollywood that relies upon nothing but its intrinsic merit to win favor. There is no maudlin recital of the artist's sentimental attachment to Washington, although in this instance anything that Mr. Boles might say probably would be true. He is very fond of Washington and has many stanch friends here who always accord him a rousing welcome. Neither is there any inane chatter concerning a purely fictitious Hollywood and its misunderstood residents. This is all very refreshing.

Mr. Boles came here to sing and that is what he does. As we stood backstage during his third performance Saturday afternoon and listened to that wave after wave of applause that greeted his every number and then redoubled as he took his many final bows, it occurred to a mentality that can catch onto anything, if given a little time, that here was as sound a hit as had ever come along to the local boards.

There is a quality of genuineness and charm about the Boles personality that manages to get over the footlights even more effectively than it expresses itself from the screen. You would realize this if you were to encounter the hordes of autograph hunters that are constantly dogging this genial and patient star's heels, and could hear what they have to say of and to him.

Washington is his second week's booking in the East—Cleveland was the first—and perhaps the last. Mr. Boles is in the East primarily on a combined business and pleasure trip. If his agent books any more engagements, he will play them; if not, he will be just as well satisfied. After Washington, he will go on to New York and then, after a round of the new shows and a few of the night spots, back to the coast and that new contract on the Paramount lot.

Asked where the Cuban jungle scenes in "A Message to Garcia," in which he, Wallace Beery and Barbara Stanwyck are cofeatured on the screen at the Fox this week, the Lieut. Rowan of the picture let drop that it was all made on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot in Movietone City. The jungle scenes were made on one sound stage and the water scenes of Rowan's escape from the steamship and flight to shore in a row boat on another. It may not be surprising, after all, that an old West Indian thought the tropical jungle looked just a wee bit temperate zone after last Tuesday's preview!

Music lovers of the Capital ought to find precisely the prescription the doctor ordered in next week's bill at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater. The major screen feature will be the new Grace Moore picture for Columbia, "The King Steps Out," with Franchot Tone doing the kinging, and on the stage will be heard the Radio City Music Hall Glee Club, making its first appearance away from Rockefeller Center in New York. More about "The King Steps Out" tomorrow, barring flood, pestilence and acts of God. They are screening it today at 2.

In Saturday's review of the current bill at the Earle, we had the temerity to remark that Cliff "Ukulele Ike" Edwards is singing better than we ever have heard him before during 80 or 90 years of theatergoing, man and boy. No wonder! Master Edwards, it seems, has been tuning up the old pipes under an efficient coach, against the day when he will sing some of the Gilbert and Sullivan roles in the Savoyard operas, or something. On the basis of this week's demonstration, Cliff already has what it takes, but when he gets around to doing Nanki-Poo, in "The Mikado," he will have to stick a longer neck on the old uke to make it look a little more like a nineteenth-century wandering minstrel's lute and less like Toots Paka and her Royal High-way-an Troubadours!

Dots and Dashes.

Cliff Edwards and Gracie Barrie, coheadlining at the Earle, both are headed for Hollywood and the moom pitchers . . . Cliff at M-G-M, Gracie at Universal . . . Since Wini Shaw's last personal appearance here a year ago, she has been featured in six films—three of them not yet released . . . An unusually pretentious musical offering is in preparation for presentation on the Fox stage within the next four weeks . . . It is a 60-piece symphony orchestra, to be featured in a special production, with Yascha Bunchuk, concert cellist and celebrated conductor, directing . . . More of this later . . . And we will try not to mention the watergate! . . . But not too hard . . . Benrimo, noted author and producer, will introduce his latest protege, Rilla Dau, to Washington's musical leaders and the drama desks at a cocktail party in the Shoreham Lounge tomorrow evening from 5 to 7 . . . Ralph DeF. Edmonds, former program manager at WRC, has his thumb in the punchbowl, too . . . Maxwell Anderson will have three plays on Broadway next season, all in verse . . . Katharine Cornell will appear in his "Wingless Victory." Lunt and Fontanne in a new historical drama, and a modern comedy, still to be written, will be handed to Guthrie McClintic for first reading . . . It was McClintic who produced and directed "Winterset" . . . And what has become of "The Old Maid?"

Gayety

"DAMAGED SOULS" ("A WOMAN BRANDED"). Jewel release of the German production, "Gefahren der Liebe," directed by Eugene Thiele, with English subtitles by W. F. Hedwig and H. R. Huber, featuring Toni Van Eycke, Hans Steinbieve, Albert Bassermann and Kurt Lilian. "RENO." Paradise picture, directed by Aubrey Scotto, featuring James Rennie, Judith Woods, Olive Borden, Harry Short, Harry Tyler and Walter Fenner. Reviewed Sunday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Motion pictures assumed complete control of the Ninth street sector of the entertainment front as yesterday Samuel Cummings, perennial harbinger of the summer season, reopened the Gayety Theater for the usual "for men only" exhibition of screen attractions, hygiene lecture and living models.

The principal exhibit reflected upon the screen is "Damaged Souls" —which also bears the titles "A Woman Branded" and "Gefahren der Liebe"— a carefully contrived dissertation supervised by Dr. D. Slutterman. Dealing with an unfortunate experience and the ravages of treponema pallida and how such may be prevented and cured, the picture presents an intelligent argument which is more sociological in import than entertaining, per se. The foreign cast, speaking in German (with stenciled subtitles in great number), has been well selected and perform with care.

Murder-Mystery Antidote.

The supplementary feature is "Reno," a murder-mystery with a shyster lawyer (Walter Fenner) becoming the corpus delicti to the satisfaction of all. A girl (Judith Woods), innocent, of course, is accussed, but with the help of an Edmund-Lowelsh detective (James Rennie) everything works out all right. Others in the cast include Olive Borden, Harry Short and Harry Tyler.

For the stage portion of the bill, one Dr. Barwbier speaks on matters of social hygiene, presenting as an epilogue to his remarks five "living models" exemplifying various endocrinal types.

In comparison with other programs of this type presented in earlier years, this is among the very best; the pictures are for the most part well made (the prints, however, seem to be old) and the acting better than one usually sees.

Trips Planned To Stimulate Foreign Trade

By the Associated Press.

Announcement probably within two weeks of a trade promotion tour in South America by representatives of the Nation's textile industry and Government experts was expected yesterday in official circles.

It would be the first of a series of such trips, as projected by the Commerce Department, to various countries with a view to stimulating trade.

Plans for the tour neared completion as Government and industry generally began observance of national foreign trade week to create "a more enlightened interest" in foreign trade.

Impetus also was given the foreign trade movement by a State Department announcement that the fourteenth reciprocal trade agreements was to be signed with Finland today.

Opens Tonight.

Foreign trade week opens tonight with an address in Philadelphia by Secretary Daniel C. Roper, during which he will read a message from President Roosevelt.

Secretary Cordell Hull will speak in New York Friday. He also will read a Presidential message on Maritime Day.

Several other Government officials and businessmen interested in foreign trade will speak during the week at luncheons and other meetings throughout the country.

The week is sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the National Foreign Trade Council and other private business groups in co-operation with Government agencies.

"The purpose of foreign trade week," a Commerce Department announcement said, "is to create a more enlightened interest in the development of foreign trade and to impress its importance on the economic life of the Nation.

Other Junkets Planned.

"Speakers will stress the direct effect of the free movement of commerce between this and other countries on employment as well as on the lives of every individual in the country and will discuss the relation of this phase of activity to the national prosperity."

Success of the South American venture, officials said, would point the way to trips to other countries, and would stimulate the exchange of visits on the part of foreign business men.

Particular attention is to be paid to sections of South America where other countries have taken American customers during the depression.

Il Duce Greets Sons ReturnedFromWar

Rome, May 17 (AP).—Premier Mussolini, with his whole family and some 5,000 others, today welcomed his sons and son-inlaw home from war.

They waited half an hour at the Littorio airfield before the four-motored plane arrived from Brindisi. The premier sat unconcernedly on the grass with his little children until rain finally drove him to cover. He indignantly refused the offer of an umbrella.

When the plane was sighted sirens sounded and the crowd cheered. As Vittorio and Bruno, sons of Il Duce, and Count Galeazzo Ciano, his son-in-law, emerged from the plane Mussolini threw his arms around them and kissed them on both cheeks. Then he passed them on to the other members of his family.

Grace Moore Is Honored By Royalty in Denmark

Copenhagen, May 17 (AP).—Grace Moore, American opera and motion picture star, was honored by King Christian of Denmark tonight after singing "La Boheme" at the Royal Danish Opera.

After the third act the monarch received Miss Moore in the royal box where the entire royal family sat, and pinned on her a gold medal of the order of "Ingenio et Arti," the country's highest artistic decoration. The spectators, who packed the house, cheered.

Only five foreigners previously had received the award, including Maria Jeritza, opera star, and Anna Pavlova, dancer.

Police Near Solution In N. Y. Subway Killing

New York, May 17.—(AP).—A solution within 48 hours of the mysterious slaying of Edgar L. Eckert, men's clothing firm executive whose body was found in a West Forty-second street subway station last Thursday morning, was promised tonight by a high police official.

The official, who withheld use of his name, said a 'gold medallion stolen by Eckert's assailant had been found in a pawnshop and was traced to the person who pledged it.

Squads of police searched the city for the killer, said by police to be a man of powerful stature and believed a subway pickpocket.

Senator to Speak.

Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, will address the Georgia Democratic Club Friday night at the Hotel Washington, it was announced yesterday. He will be introduced by Senator Richard R. Russel, jr., of Georgia.

That "Lady in Red" Is Returning

Having appeared here just about a year ago on the same bill with Phil Regan—in Washington a week ago to second Freddie Miller when he lost his featherweight title to Petey Sarron—Wini Shaw has been booked for a return engagement at the Earle Theater, as headliner of the vaudeville bill for the wek bginning Friday, May 29. Winifred Lei Momi, to give her authentic English-Irish-Hawaiian nomenclature, has become one of the cinema's most popular singers. Her black silk likeness above is as she will appear in her next film, "Men on Her Mind"—or vice versa!

Stories About Pictures You're Seeing.

Hollywood, May 17.

"Show Boat." Although Universal made the flicker, "Show Boat," in 1929, the current edition of "Show Boat" should not be called a remake. There is an interesting cinema history about these two pictures.

HELEN MORGAN

Universal bought the screen rights to Edna Ferber's novel, "Show Boat." When they finally got to preparing a scenario of this novel, Oscar Hammerstein and Jerome Kern had transformed it into one of the truly great American musical comedies. Florenz Ziegfeld produced it and it was a sensational success.

Also, immediately after Universal completed the making of the flicker, "Show Boat,' 'talking pictures were firmly established. The "Show Boat" that Universal made was a silent picture.

Something had to be done, quickly.

Universal decided to use some of the Jerome Kern "Show Boat" music. A prologue, with sound, was hastily made. Several of the numbers were sung. The prologue, among other things, consisted of Helen Morgan being hoisted to the top of a piano to sing "My Bill." After this "talkie" prologue, the silent picture went on.

When Universal decided to make "Show Boat" again, they followed the new trend in picture making. They hired the authors of the stage play to prepare the scenario. Oscar Hammerstein wrote every line of the screen play, and the new ending of "Show Boat," as it is in the flicker, is his idea. Jerome Kern worked with Hammerstein and also wrote three new songs for the picture.

Both Kern and Hammerstein visited the set frequently while the picture was in production. Once a week, generally on a Saturday night, they sat in the projection room and looked at the week's "rushes." After the preview, among the many who loved the picture were Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein. More and more, authors of successful stage plays have expressed their approval of the manner in which their plays have been made into icitures.

The flicker, "Show Boat," cost over $1,000,000 to produce. Actual shooting on it started on December 9, 1935, and it was completed on March 11, 1936. Director Whale shot 178,000 feet of film. The released picture, now on exhibition, is 10,840 feet of film.

A camera crew was sent to the Mississippi to take some scenes of the river and the surrounding country. About three shots of what was filmed is used in "Show Boat." The camera crew was there during the winter and the trees weren't in foliage. The scenario calls for spring and summer sequences. And since leaves couldn't be painted on the trees, this film wasn't used.

There was plenty of criticism when James Whale was assigned to direct the picture. Hollywood didn't believe that an Englishman could direct this picture with a native American background. In fact, Whale says that his delightful introduction to the story was, you'll ruin it."

James Whale is a slim Englishman with blue eyes and gray hair, yet collegiate in appearance, who came to this country to stage the play "Journey's End." He was then signed by Paramount, but did nothing. Next, Howard Hughes hired him for $1,000 a week as a war expert on "Hell's Angels." All his suggestions were disregarded. He next was signed to make the flicker version of "Journey's End." This established him as a first-rank director. His method of direction: "I always speak to the author of the scenario first. If the author tells me I understand his play, then I start to work and try to make the actor understand."

It was after Director Whale had several talks with Kern and Hammerstein that he felt certain he could diect the picture, regardless of the fact that many believed him too British. Director Whale favored getting as many of the stage players as possible. He says, however, that his big problem was "not to present 'Show Boat' as an old favorite."

The last sequence of the flicker, with all the principal characters singing, was filmed after the first preview. Helen Westley, who plays the role of "Parthy," was in New York. Yet it was necessary for her to stand in the box in the theater with "Captain Andy," played by Charles Winninger. For this one shot, a double was hired and made up and dressed to resemble Miss Westley. An extra named Charlotte Bay plays her part for this one quick take. But you can't detect the difference.

Nazis Sponsor Book Exposing SovietActivities

Anti-Komintern Publishes International Volume on Communism.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 17.—Characterized by Nazi orators as a "contribution toward the collective security of all civilized nations against the menace of bolshevism," an international whitebook on communistic activities in 48 countries has been issued here by the Government-subsidized anti-Komintern.

It is a 500-page volume containing contributions not only by German writers, but by students of, or propagandists against, Left-Radical tendencies in many foreign countries. The French Fascist leader, Col. Francois de la Rocque, is represented, and there is an article on communism in the United States by Dr. H. Williams, of New York.

The chapter on American communism stresses the San Francisco general strike of 1934 as a "civil war between the State of California and the Communist Harry Bridges' strike committee." The American Communist is virtually reminded, it says, that he "belongs to the worker's fatherland, the U. S. S. R." and must sieze every opportunity to sabotage in American factories and munitions works.

Chapters describing Communist uprisings in other countries are illustrated profusely with photographs of alleged mass executions. This is particularly true of the chapter on Soviet suppression of the opposition in the Ukraine.

By way of emphasizing the international scope of its anti-communistic efforts the anti-Komintern announced the completion of its white book at a meeting addressed not only by the German editor of the book but by a Swedish spokesman for the foreign contributors.

These speakers vigorously stressed the idea of "collective security" against world revolution, a security which they contended could best be achieved under the slogan, "Patriots of all nations, unite."

On The Air Today

Out in Indianapolis about this time of year is heard the annual discussion of whether the 500-mile automobile classic on Decoration Day is a sacrilege of the holiday. Right or wrong, the race is always held just the same—and more than 100,000 persons attend from many parts of the globe.

It is interesting to note that the day seems to be a favorite one for major sports activities over the country as a whole. For example, C. B. S. has scheduled "six spectacles" for May 30, as the announcement reads, for "speed-loving Americans."

The events are the American Airlines transport flight from Los Angeles to New York, against time; the 500-mile automobile classic at Indianapolis; Davis Cup matches between Australia and the United States; pick-up from mid-ocean of the Queen Mary on her maiden dash to these shores, then to Franklin Field, Philadelphia, for the track and field meet there, and finally the Decoration Day Handicap from Chicago's Hawthorne race track.

* * * *

It is with some temerity that I refer to the state of the public mind out in Indiana, for I have at hand a severe scolding from Mr. C. E. Rowe, who maintains that "there has been too much personality in the radio articles for several months." Mr. Rowe further declares that I write my copy with no regard to the programs.

Alas and alack, I have been laboring under an illusion all these months that a fairly comprehensive job had been done in advising the listening public of notable and outstanding programs from day to day. Sometimes the section of this small space headed "Featured Today" is not as large as I would like to have it—but unhappily the radio writer is dependent on the advices he receives from the press departments of the broadcasting stations.

The "Timetable," in an adjoining column, gives the hour of all programs; this space attempts, in part, to direct attention to special events and programs of a one-time character.

And while indulging in the rather shameful business of writing about my own space, may I take this opportunity to thank those persons who telephoned or wrote their appreciation of my small efforts in behalf of the "Cheerio" off-again-on-again which lately took place at WMAL. My good friend, Jim McGrath, probably does not thank me for having a hand in running his "Morning Prelude" off the morning schedule, but, sez I, let the people have what the largest number want. Even if we have to indulge in too much personality at times to do it.

Gertrude Niesen comes to the Fox Friday immediately on the closing of the "Ziegfeld Follies" on Broadway. From an unknown in 1933 (made C. B. S. debut that year) to stage stardom in three years—not so bad . . . Now we know what "scat singing" is, close on the heels of learning that "swing music" is playing a tune so no one can recognize it: "Scat singing" is vocalizing that is easy for those reluctant to learn the words to their songs! The words comes from no less than Jack Powell, "scat" singer with Frankie Masters' Orchestra, heard tonight in the "Greater Minstrels," WMAL, at 8.

Economist Finds U. S. Half Out of Depression

Chicago, May 17 (AP).—William F. Ogburn, professor of sociology at the University of Chicago, said today that indexes of social and economic changes during 1934-35 showed the United States was half way out of the depression low of 1932-33.

Ogburn said his survey, based on 43 fields of economic activity and social trends, revealed that "recovery has been somewhat halting, due to the large volume of unemployment."

His charts, published in the current issue of the University's American Journal of Sociology, tended to show that new industries recorded striking increases.

Ogburn said "church attendance, which rose somewhat during depression, is now dropping off in recovery," and high school attendance was at an all time peak.

Financial, Business and Industrial Review of the Day

Steel Industry Buoyant With Heavier Orders

High Production Rate Is Foreseen for Summer Months.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 17.—The magazine Steel said today that heavier commitments for structural shapes, steel pipe, sheet and tin plate and increased pig iron shipments have imparted buoyancy to steel markets. The magazine said there are prospects for a high rate of production during the summer in many steel consuming industries, particularly agricultural equipment and railroad car building.

"While the preponderance of opinion in the industry at present is that there will be no general advance in steel prices for third quarter," the publication said, "some producers consider it more than a remote possibility.

"Steelmakers in the past few years have publicized contemplated rises more often than they have actually declared them. In 1934, when prices were raised for third quarter, after consumers had been given an opportunity to cover requirements, steelworks operations dropped from a peak of 62 per cent in June to an average of 24 per cent in the next three months."

The automotive industry, Steel observed, continued to set the pace in steel requirements, auto production last week at 117,156 units showing only a slight reduction. Steelworks operations held at 68½ per cent.

Steel reported farm equipment manufacturers anticipate a continuation of heavy operations for from 30 to 60 days.

"They are now starting fall production programs, and believe new business will be sufficient to maintain good, if not capacity, schedules during the summer," the magazine said.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Renewed Market Confidence Is Based on Business Activity; Trading Volume Restricted.

New York, May 17.—In one of the dullest weeks since last summer the speculative markets slowly recovered confidence on the absence of further selling pressure, and toward the close prices managed to move up again. Government bonds were firm, partly on Treasury support and partly on the further heavy importation of gold from Paris, where the flight from the franc continues on fear of devaluation. The gain in gold this week was $54,000,000, although that amount by no means measured the total loss of the Bank of France.

Incoming gold tended to allay the fears recently felt that devaluation of the franc might be followed by an early outflow of the metal and withdrawal of foreign funds held here. Such a development may yet come, but the nearby outlook is for the reverse of that process. Another factor in the stock market was the break-up of the forces working for passage of the corporation undistributed profits tax bill, with its threat to business expansion and stability.

Apparently the stock market had come to take the long term rather than the short view of the probable effects of such tax. In the same way the defeat of the Frazier-Lemke inflationary bill, providing for the liquidation of farm debt with the issuance of greenbacks, was followed by a sharp rally in stock prices, although ordinarily inflation bait would bring buyers into stocks. Possibly the chief reason for those seeming anomalies was the plain fact that the stock market once more is down to its founda'ion of business improvement.

Taxes On Way.

Any good feeling that might have been raised over the good sense shown by the Senate committee in refusing to swallow the surplus profits tax must not be allowed to obscure certain facts. One is that taxes on business as well as upon individual incomes are bound to increase, with more or less damage to industrial activity; another is that no sign yet has appeared of any regeneration among the high spenders of the New Deal. The tax is only the symptom. The real disease is the wasteful spending, and until that is stopped business won't expand as it should, however much some of the consumption industries may prosper.

Last week was another quiet one for new security offerings, and the rest is preparing the way for another burst of refunding shortly. Few observers profess to see anything that threatens continued cheap money, and in fact this week brought a jump of $70,000,000 in excess bank reserves. Advantage will continue to be taken of prevailing easy conditions for refunding bonds into lower rates of interest. Application to the savings market for new capital is another matter. Little has been done along that line, and little is in prospect.

An event of the week in the money market was the lifting of call and time money rates, as predicted by ¼ per cent, the former to 1 per cent and the latter to 1¼ per cent, on stock market collateral. The higher rates came purely through agreement among the banks, the excuse being the hold the new borrowing regulations give the banks on calling loans and requiring brokers to put up more collateral. The service on the limited amount of money borrowed by brokers was worth the higher price, it was decided, and so the charge will be paid—out of the pockets of those carrying stocks on margin.

Bonus Payments Coming.

That development is not significant of a rising money market, nor will it in itself tend to hamper speculation. Even 1 per cent is an extremely low rate for call money, and stocks that do not yield more than enough to carry themselves on current charges are held without regard to money rates anyhow. Just the same the higher charge, the uplift in margin requirements, the procedure of the SEC in cases involving "market making" by brokers and operators, the close check by the Federal Reserve Board and the general feeling that the market is not to be allowed to go far or fast is having the inevitable effect of reducing trading. Some of it is going to London, Canada and other places; much of it is simply dying. What the ultimate effect on prices may be cannot be told offhand, for speculation for all its drawbacks often does much real good.

Industry in the past two weeks seems to have held even in some places and receded slightly, according to seasonal usage, in others. Railroad traffic last week declined a trifle, but gained sharply over a year ago. The steel industry this week slipped a notch, but also is much more active than at the same time last year. Retail buying is about on a level with last spring. The motor industry continues to be a strong spot. Meanwhile the near approach of the period of disbursement of approximately three billions on combined soldiers' and farmers' bonus account must be reckoned as a stabilizer for some industries this summer and autumn.

Missouri Pac. Loss $15,241,695 in Year

New York, May 17 (AP).—Net loss of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. in 1935 amounted to $15,241,695, compared with a loss of $14,201,818 in 1934, the annual report of Guy A. Thompson, trustee, released today, showed.

Railway operating revenues for the year totaled $74,578,498, compared with $73,435,590 in 1934, while railway operating expenses amounted to $60,750,184, as against $58,380,449. Restoration of wage decreases to employes involved an outlay of $2,563,332, the report showed.

The trustee reported the railroad property in good condition "and sufficiently maintained to meet requirements." He recommended the purchase of at least 2,000 freight cars this year in anticipation of increased loadings. The report stated that 492 new industries, with an estimated output of 91,064 cars annually, had been located adjacent to the company's lines during the year.

Government Buys 685 White Trucks

Cleveland, Ohio, May 17.—Government orders for 685 White and Indiana trucks, representing a dollar volume of $1,312,000, have been received from the Departments of War and Agriculture within the past week, according to Robert F. Black, president of the White Motor Co. of Cleveland.

Production was started immediately and deliveries will be made in June and July, he said.

The addition of the Government orders to the hundreds of orders pouring in from private industries every week has caused the company to step up its production schedule to the highest point since 1918, Black said.

Revenue Bill Is Condemned By Bankers

I. B. A. Governors Call for Cut in Expenses and Balanced Budget.

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 17.—The board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America in a resolution today condemned the proposed Federal revenue act of 1936 as "unsound in principle" and urged a balanced budget and reduced governmental expenditures. The bankers ended their annual meeting today. All sessions were executive.

"It is our opinion," stated the resolution, "that the fiscal policy of the Government must be based upon the principle that the budget be balanced during the coming fiscal year; that expenditures, both ordinary and extraordinary, be curtailed.

"It is our further opinion that taxes levied for purposes other than for revenue are misleading unless the purpose of such taxes is fully disclosed at the time of their imposition.

"Be it further resolved, therefore, that this association is opposed to the revenue act of 1936 as passed by the House of Representatives, for the following reasons:

"First—Because any legislation which by its nature leaves industry uncertain as to its future course, or which fails to disclose the share which industry must contribute to establish a balanced budget and a sound fiscal policy, will of itself increase the difficulty of effecting a balance between revenues and expenditures by retarding industrial progress and by increasing the burden of relief.

"Second—Because the real effect of the tax is to establish an experimental social reform, a fact not adequately disclosed, and the desirability of which is neither openly advocated by our Government nor accepted by our people.

"Third—Because it is unsound in economic principle and, in the opinion of competent authorities, it will not produce the estimated revenue."

Six Special Trains To Carry Bankers

New York, May 17.—Six special trains will bring upward of 1,500 members of the American Institute of Banking from all parts of the country to the thirty-fourth annual convention, which will be held at Seattle, Wash, June 8-12, inclusive, it is indicated by figures on advance registrations received at the organization's national headquarters here.

Maynard W. E. Park, assistant cashier Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City, president of the institute, will preside at the session. Speakers at the opening general meeting the morning of June 9 will be Lyman E. Wakefield, president First National Bank and Trust Company, Minneapolis, Minn., and Fred N. Shepherd, executive manager American Bankers Association. Annual reports will be given by the president, educational director and secretary of the institute, and by the chairmen of its national committees. The headquarters will be the Olympic Hotel.

Exports of Cotton Exceed Last Year

New York, May 17.—American cotton was forwarded to mills of the world in larger volume this week than in the corresponding week last year, according to the weekly report of the New York Cotton Exchange. oFrwardings totaled 223,000 bales this week against 194,000 last year. Total forwardings during the season to date are 10,246,000 bales, against 8,497,000 in the corresponding period of last season.

The movement of American cotton into sight totaled 99,000 bales this week, against 56,000 last year. The total into sight for the season to date is 11,767,000 bales, against 684,000 for the corresponding period of last season. Exprts of American cotton were 50,000 bales this week, aagainst 53,000 last year. Total exports for the season to date are 5,376,000 bales, against 4,040,000 for the same period of last season.

Total Unemployed Cut to 12,714,000

New York, May 17.—The number of persons unemployed in the United States in March was reduced to 12,714,000 from 13,087,000 in February, a decrease of 373,000, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Unemployment in March was also lower than in the corresponding month last year with a decrease of 517,000. The total number unemployed a year ago was 13,231,000. Unemployment in March, however, was higher by 682,000 persons than at the low point for the business recovery movement in December, 1935, when the unemployed totaled 12,032,000.

The number o' persons employed in the United States in March amounted to 38,245,000. There were thus only 7,770,000 fewer persons employed than at the pre-depression peak in October, 1929, when the figure was 46,015,000. The discrepancy between this decrease in the employed and the total number unemployed in March is due to the fact that 2,485,000 persons were unemployed in October, 1929, and to the fact that between October, 1929, and March of this year, there was an increase of 2,459,000 in the total supply of workers.

The council is a private organization, set up at the request of the United States Government, in order that there might be an adequate, effective and impartial organization to carry on the work of properly protecting American interests in defaulted dollar bonds of foreign governments.

The council has carried on several negotiations to this end during the past year, details of which are given in the report.

Miss Brown Will Be Wed To Naval Aid

Miss Katherine Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wrisley Brown, whose marriage to Lieut. Comdr. James Joseph Hughes, U. S. N., will take place tomorrow, will have a "New York" wedding in Washington. Her wedding gown, her bouquet, the bridesmaids' dresses and the flowers they will carry—even the wedding cake and a man to put it in place—are from New York.

The gowns were made by one of New York's leading couturiers, and Miss Brown's entire trousseau, down to the smallest handkerchief, was made in that city.

Both Commander Hughes, whose mother lives in New York, and Miss Brown have many connections there, and a large number of their friends plan to come from New York for the wedding. Among them are Mr. and Mrs. Woodford Thomas Stewart and Miss Katharine Carl, Miss Brown's godmother. Dr. and Mrs. Edward Uzzell, of Atlantic City, are others who are coming from out of town.

Miss Brown has chosen as her maid of honor Miss Fontaine Flannery, who entertained over the week-end at a dinner in compliment to the bride-to-be and her fiance, later taking her guests to dance at the Chevy Chase Club. The bridesmaids will be Miss Helena Shafroth, of Annapolis; Miss Katherine Pearson, Miss Anne Moussot, Miss Helen Defrees, Miss Dorothy Marlatt and Miss Dorothy Tirrell.

Commander Hughes will have as his best man, Lieut. Comdr. M. R. Greer, and the ushers will be Lieut. Comdr. J. B. Sykes, Lieut. Comdr. G. C. Dyer, Lieut. Comdr. J. J. Patterson 3d, Lieut. Comdr. W. C. Ansel, Lieut. Comdr. J. L. Holloway, jr., Lieut. Comdr. J. U. Lademan, Lieut. Comdr. H. W. Chandler and Lieut. P. E. McDowell.

The ceremony will be in the Church of the Covenant at 5 o'clock and a reception will follow at the Sulgrave Club.

Miss Brown was presented to society last year. After attending the Potomac School and Miss Madiera's School in Washington, she studied for a year in Paris.

Commander Hughes was graduated from the Naval Academy in the class of 1919 and during the last two years has been on duty in the office of the Chief of Naval Operations. He is the son of Mrs. Eugene Hughes, of New York.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Mary Jane Brahany, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas William Brahany, to Mr. Edmund Henry Lloyd, son of Dr. and Mrs. Bolivar Lloyd, on June 4 in St. Matthews Church. The ceremony, which will take place at 4 o'clock, will be followed by a reception at the Shoreham, where Mr. and Mrs. Grahany make their home.

Miss Frances Ridgway will be Miss Brahany's maid of honor and Mr. Lloyd will have his brother, Mr. Bolivar Lloyd, as best man.

The bridesmaids will be Miss Betty Wyllis Stone, of Clarendon, Va.; Miss Dorothy Emerson, of Atlanta, Ga., and Miss Beverley Kurtzmann, of Maplewood, N. J., students at Duke University; Miss Shirley Browning, Miss Mary Brush and Miss Betty Myers, of Washington.

The ushers will be Mr. Roger M. Lloyd, brother of the bridegroom; Dr. Charles Coulon, Mr. Blanchard K. Slaughter, Mr. Frederick Sessions, Mr. Robert Keith and Mr. James Bailey, of Washington.

To Entertain at Garden Party

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. BRICE CLAGETT,

photographed with her young son, Dorsey, in the garden of her Maryland estate, Landover, where, with Mr. Clagett, she will entertain at a garden party next Sunday. Mrs. Clagett is the former Miss Sarah McAdoo, daughter of Senator William Gibbs McAdoo.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Gen. John J. Pershing, leader of the A. E. F., hale, hearty and genial as ever, arrived in Washington yesterday in ample time to attend the veterans' garden party in the White House grounds on Thursday, an event he never misses.

Without Gen. Pershing the veterans' garden party would not be the same for thousands of Doughboys who rejoice at the chance it gives to see their war-time commander once more. With military restrictions of rank temporarily abbrogated, the men crowd about the general and his good right arm is weary by night from having placed his signature on the identification cards of most of his fellow guests.

Gen. Pershing has been in Arizona with his sister, Miss Mary Pershing, of Omaha, Nebr., for the spring season. En route to Washington, he stopped off for a few days in his native State of Missouri, where he was born in 1860. Old friends welcomed him eagerly there, he dedicated memorials, spoke to school children in his home town, and thoroughly enjoyed being a Missourian once more.

The general will remain in Washington for a time, after which he expects to return to France, where he is completing his duties as head of the commission in charge of America's war dead in French cemeteries. Through the general's efforts Gold Star Mothers may feel assured graves of sons, who gave their lives in the war and are buried on foreign soil, are suitably cared for.

Today Gen. Pershing will attend the luncheon for the special membership campaign, now under way in behalf of Washington Cathedral. He is national chairman of the National Committee of Washington Cathedral, a member of its chapter, and has done much to further its cause since he joined the undertaking a few years ago.

The artistic genius of the first Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who was Ellen Axson of Rome, Ga., and gained considerable renown as an artist, appears to have been transmitted to her grandson, Woodrow Wilson Sayre, son of the Undersecretary of State Francis B. Sayre and the late Mrs. Jessie Woodrow Wilson Sayre. The Hobby Show, held last week at St. Albans' School, where young Sayre is a student, included in the really remarkable collection of exhibits by the students, a number of his oil paintings. The technique was unusually good for a boy of his years. He paints with a virility and sense of color and rhythm that would have delighted his maternal grandmother.

The St. Albans School hobby show, which was arranged under the direction and inspiration of the Headmaster Canon Albert Lucas contained entries from sons of noted families of the Capital. Their hobbies ranged from collections of poisoned arrows and other deadly weapons to specimens of their work as amateur naturalists.

Interesting Season of Music Is Planned for Inaugural Year

Enesco, Melchior and Vettergren Among Artists to Be Brought to District by Mrs. Townsend; Lectures by Miss Richards to Be on Wednesdays.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend who, with Mr. Townsend, expects to leave the end of May for their summer home in Schroon Lake, promises an unusually interesting season of music for Washington's coming inaugural year.

Mrs. Townsend and Miss Janet Richards, dean of lecturers on current events, who for nearly 30 years has given her lectures on Mondays, have exchanged days this year. Mrs. Townsend's musicales, which for years have been on Wednesdays, will be on Monday mornings at the Mayflower, and Miss Richards' lectures on Wednesday mornings, at the Sulgrave Club, instead of at the Willard Hotel.

One of the artists Mrs. Townsend is bringing to Washington this season is George Enesco, who appeared in her series during her initial season 14 years ago and at that time was entertained as the guest of Prince and Princess Bibesco at the Rumanian Legation. He has played for groups of freinds on the occasion of visits to Washington since, but not in public performance here.

He is equally gifted as violinist, pianist, composer and conductor and is to share the program with the noted cellist, Felix Salmond, of the Juilliard Institute, who has been his friend for many years. One of the features of the concert will be the first rendition in this country of a sonata for cello and piano, written by Mr. Enesco and dedicated to Mr. Salmond. They will play together, Enesco laying aside his violin to take the piano part in his composition.

To Visit Menuhin.

He is to be guest conductor with the New York Philharmonic and the Philadelphia Symphony orchestras while he is in the East and then expects to go to a ranch in California to join young Yehudi Menuhin, who studied with him in Paris and is said to owe much of his success to Enesco's teaching. He will spend a month there coaching the young violinist, who is spending a year in study, giving no concerts during the comng season, and who will probably go to Europe to continue his work with the Rumanian master.

Mrs. Townsend will present two Scandinavian artists on another program, Loritz Melchior, who until now has devoted himself to opera and has not been heard by concert audiences, and Gertrude Vettergren, close friend of Flagstad, to whose Brangane Flagstad likes best to sing Isolde. Melchior is a friend of the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, who are looking forward to his coming. Miss Vettergren, who has been hailed by some of the critics as a greater Carmen than Rosa Ponselle, will sing the same numbers from the opera which Ponselle sang here last season, giving Washington concert-goers opportunity to decide which of the two artists' interpretations they prefer.

Details of Concerts.

Charles Kullmann, the tenor to whose Metropolitan debut three trainloads of students and faculty members went from Yale, his alma mater, will sing here this year as he did last, and Mrs. Townsend is also bringing John Charles Thomas for whom she always has requests.

Part of her summer will be spent in attending to details in connection with concerts of the winter season, but the artists have all been engaged. This important part of the arrangements she always completes immediately after the close of each season, but still requests keep coming to her, she says, well into the summer from those who attend the concerts, for one artist or another they particularly desire to hear.

Mrs. Townsend and Miss Richards are both gratified at the plan of exchanging days for their morning programs. They have been friends for years and many of the Washingtonians who have long attended Miss Richards' talks also have been unfailing patrons of Mrs. Townsend's musicales.

Miss Richards has the distinction of being one of three women on the Town Hall list in New York and of having lectured ten times there to capacity audiences.

She has lectured in 70 cities of the United States and in many European capitals and for 20 years gave a lecture every other week during the season in New York City. She illustrates her talks with maps. She has never been under management, but during her entire career has arranged her own lecture tours and has also trained many other lecturers on current events who are now successful in other cities.

Miss Richards will spend the summer as usual near New York Harbor in Maine and later probably will take a sea voyage.

COCKTAIL LOUNGE

For Love or Money

By Rob Eden.

Brenda Fayre at 22 has been for years the sole support of her invalid sister, Lally. While Brenda has earned their living, Lally in her wheelchair has kept house with only her canary, Peter, for company. After Brenda had been without work for several weeks she receives an offer from Walter Jason, promoter and mining stock salesman. Jason offers to hire her to entertain prospective stock buyers—offers to buy the wardrobe she will need—offers to pay her $50 a week and give her a commission on sales.

Though she suspects Jason of selling worthless stock, Brenda accepts his offer in order to support Lally. She hopes to keep secret from Lally the type of "work" she is doing. Her deceit is made possible by the storing of her "siren" wardrobe in the apartment of Ethel Rush, Jason's woman partner, and by Lally's sudden interest in Val Sargent, writer, who occupies the apartment above theirs.

CHAPTER EIGHT.

There was a clear division between Brenda's two worlds—almost as clear and clean as if a knife had cut her days in two. One world was the world that included Lally and Val, the other world contained the Jason enterprises. From the beginning they stayed apart, so far apart that nothing could bring them together. With the Northcraft people, Brenda's life had been one world, Lally in it, too.

It was Val who made the worlds separate, and kept Lally out of the other one, and the girl was grateful to him, although he didn't know what he was doing. His frequent visits to the flat, his comings, his goings took Lally's mind off what her sister was doing. Not that she wasn't curious. She was, and Brenda at times had to satisfy her curiosity, but Lally's curiosity had a divided interest, something that was new in her.

Brenda found herself wishing that Val's novel would take him a long time to write—longer than the six months she pledged to Walter Jason. She wished Val would make permanent headquarters at the Corwin. Every time she heard him say that he had finished another chapter, her heart sank a little, for that meant that his novel was moving on to a close. She couldn't bear to have it end—this relationship which had sprung up so swiftly and meant so much to Lally—and he to her. She couldn't bear to think what the Corwin would be without Val, without the little games he played with Lally, without the constant talk of Maizie and what she had done and what she was going to do.

For Lally had accepted Val as one of the household. Now there was Brenda and Val—and Peter. Lally mothered all of them. Saw that Brenda had good dinners, and Val, too, for he was a constant guest at the table. She scolded him when he worked too late at night, and scolded him when he came into the flat from a long tramp in the rain, with his clothes wet and his shoes wet. Sent him upstairs to change, and while he was up there, made him hot beef tea to drink when he came back. Scolded him tenderly as she scolded Peter and Brenda.

There were some of his socks in her workbasket, which she was mending for him, and there was a shirt which was buttonless, and a sweater that she had darned at the elbows.

Needs Someone.

"I tell you he needs someone to take care of him, Brenda. He doesn't even know when his suits need pressing," she would say with an exasperated frown on her forehead. "The next time we go upstairs, you might look around in his dresser drawers again and see if there's anything else that needs mending. He won't bring anything down to me. I've asked him. We've got to get it ourselves."

So the next time the girls went upstairs, Brenda would ferret around in Val's closet, in his cupboards and find something that Lally could mend, because it made her so happy to be doing something for him.

There was an extra carton of cigarets on the table of the girls' flat for him so that if he ran out he wouldn't have to go upstairs and get more. There was also a small notebook and pencil handy so that if he happened to think of anything about Maizie while he was there, he could jot it down. Lally always remembered to tear off the notes he had made and put them in his pocket before he left.

There was his napkin ring and his napkin in the drawer in the kitchen, all ready for him, and a dish of the hard candies he liked on the dining room table. Some books, too, in the flat which he had brought down for Lally and Brenda to read, and a pencil sharpener which Brenda had bought on Lally's advice, so that she could sharpen his pencils every time he came.

Sometimes the girls went up to his flat, but always in response to a typewritten invitation. "Mr. Val Sargent will be entertaining at dinner tomorrow evening in Maizie's absence. The menu will consist of broiled steaks (if Lally will broil them) baked potatoes over which Mr. Sargent will officiate, and a dessert purchased at the Spic 'n' Span bakery—choice of the dessert to be incharge of the blonde sales-girl whose name is Mamie. Dishes positively will be washed by Mr. Sargent! R. S. V. P."

Or, "Mr. Val Sargent is reading the twenty-fourth episode of Maizie this evening to a large and grilliant audience which will consist of Miss Brenda Fayre, Miss Laura Fayre (commonly known as Lally), and Mr. Peter Fayre (if he should care to come, which is doubtful). After the reading, Mr. Sargent will serve hot chocolate and sandwiches. R. S V. P."

Or, "Mr. Val Sargent commands the presence of Miss Brenda and Miss Laura to breakfast tomorrow morning at 11. Breakfast menu will be orange juice, omelet, (which Mr. Sargent makes very well) and coffee. If Mr. Sargent does not happen to be up when his guests arrive, please pound on the door, because the bell does not ring. R. S. V. P. (Dishes as usual washed by Mr. Sargent. This time there will be no argument about this.)"

Like Children.

Sometimes Lally forgot her mothering, and she and Val were like children when they were together, playing like children, teasing each other, pretending to quarrel, Lally in her chair, Val sprawled on the floor or lying on the couch. Brenda felt grown up, older by years than both of them as she sat and watched them, for she seldom took part in their play. Sometimes, she even felt like the mother of the two of them and often she said, "Now children!" as if they were her own and she was rebuking them.

But she loved to be with them, to hear their chatter, to watch the subtle ways Val devised to amuse Lally, and how eagerly he entered into the games himself—like a small boy.

He never came down to the flat until noon, because he knew that Lally was busy with her cleaning and her garden in the mornings. Often when he came at noon, he had lunch with Lally, and after lunch they would go out for their walk, if the weather was good. If it wasn't, they stayed at home, and talked. Lally and Val managed always to have a good deal to say.

Lally had read the entire story of Maizie. Some of the passages she knew by heart because she had a quick memory. Maizie had become for her as real as she was to Val.

"I know he's going to sell his book," she said often to Brenda.

"I know. It's so good, dear. You think it's good, don't you?"

Brenda thought it was very good. Some of the chapters moved her more than anything she had ever read. When Val and Lally were acting like children, she would look at Val and wonder how he could be two people at once, the man who had the talent to conceive Maizie, and the boy—boy despite the slight mustache of which he was so self-conscious—who was teasing Lally. They never saw him when he was working, because he wanted to be alone then, but they heard his typewriter constantly, and knew when they heard it that it was spinning out more of Maizie and her life.

Two Men.

The wonder of the two men that were both Val grew and grew as she knew him better.

"He's going to be famous, too. That's certain, Brenda, as certain as I'm sitting here. His book is going to be published and then—I hope he won't change, dear! Do you think he will?"

"He won't change, Lally. He'll always be the same Val."

"That's what I think, but Maizie frightens me sometimes. She's so real; Val has made her so real. And Paul is so real, too. They're as real as you and I. Roger would have liked Val, don't you think?"

"I'm sure he would have." To Brenda, Val seemed to replace Roger. When she came home and found him there smoking, it seemed almost as if Roger were back. And when the three of them sat down to dinner, and there was the rumble of Val's low laugh, and the quick movement of his head as he laughed, it was like having Roger back. Although they weren't alike, Val reminded her of her brother.

"It's like having Roger back," she murmured to Lally.

"Yes—and different, too."

"It's got to last." Brenda would say to herself night after night when she was in bed, and the room was in darkness and Lally's gentle breathing told her she was asleep. "It's got to last. I've got to make it last somehow."

She would lull herself to sleep with those words, repeated over and over, but in the mornings when she kissed Lally good-by and started out for Ethel's apartment, she would hear those other words which were part of her life, too, Grace's words, "How do you like sitting on a keg of dynamite?" Then she would see the smile in Grace's eyes back of her glasses. She never saw Grace, never thought of her, without recalling those words.

Printed Dimity With Plaited Jabots

EVERY WELL-PLANNED summer wardrobe, whether it is for the business girl, housewife or vacationist, should include several dark-colored frocks. They not only relieve the monotony of white and pastels, but are convenient to fall back on when the wardrobe is getting low. They also help to solve the laundry problem. Printed materials too, such as this white figure on a dark ground, are a delightful change after several days of wearing solid colors, be they light, bright or dark.

Above is shown the perfect summer frock for any and all informal occasions—and at a price that will not even make a dent in the budget. It has character, is cool, and fashioned of colorfast material. In navy, rust or May wine (deep red) this sturdy dimity print could go places or stay at home with equal abandon and smartness. The tailored collar, pleated jabot and narrow turnback cuffs are enhanced by a dainty edge of val lace, and novelty buttons parade down the front of the blouse. An action back and generous kick pleats in the skirt make this charming flower print comfortable as well as fashion wise.

Dimity, the old-time favorite which is returning to vogue as shown by the frock illustrated, is a happy innovation in this season of so many and varied washable materials. It not only has a quaint-like charm but is durable and launders like the proverbial handkerchief. When the style is so individual and attractive, it has additional allure. In any of the three colors mentioned, this frock is priced at around $4.

Umbrella Held Danger Source In Child's Hand

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

It was a rainy day and the grade school was just being let out. The road and sidewalks in front of the school were covered with what looked like a moving army of bobbing toad-stools. The children were small and unused to umbrellas, and passing motorists for the most part slowed down to avoid running over some of the children who were too busy struggling with their unaccustomed shelters to pay attention to the traffic.

For little children on their own, umbrellas are really dangerous. When there is an adult along to help and guide the child it is quite all right to let him carry his umbrella, but not when the child is alone. Slippery roads are in themselves a danger to the pedestrian, and children should be trained to take special precautions in crossing streets or in rounding corners, as there is always the possibility of a car skidding, even with a careful driver at the wheel. To take the proper precautions they must be able to see and act quickly.

The tiny child who is below the average line of vision is doubly handicapped when carrying an umbrella, by being unable to look up and having to cope with an unwieldy apparatus. He is jolted by the passers-by, and a gust of wind may at any moment tear the umbrella from his grasp and send him rushing into the traffic to catch it.

Adults are prone to forget the single-mindedness of childhood. The child who sees his precious umbrella trundling across the street forgets all danger and runs to catch it. And for a car to stop quickly on a rainy day, with the asphalt wet and slippery, is not possible.

The GENTLER SEX . . .

The Nudists.

"DID YOU HEAR about the Snooks' party?"

"Yes, but I'm not going. I haven't anything to wear."

"That's just the way with me. I haven't a thing on earth."

"Why you've got LOADS of things; I'm the one that hasn't——"

"That isn't so! You know I haven't got half as many clothes as you have. Now just tell me what I've got that's decent . . . just tell me!"

"What lace dress?"

"Oh that! It wouldn't do; it's not formal——"

"Say, is this party going to be formal? That certainly lets me out. I haven't a thing formal I'd be caught dead in——"

"Well I just supposed it was going to be formal. Wait a minute. I'll call Elsie and find what she's going to wear.

(Hello . . . Elsie? . . . Say, are you going to the Snooks' party? . . . You aren't.. Why? . . . Why you have TOO! You've got LOADS of things. I'm the one that . . . What's that? . . . No, I just supposed it was going to be formal . . . You are? . . . Well let me know what you find out.) . . . Now can you beat that?"

"What?"

"Elsie says she isn't going because she hasn't anything to wear. Did you ever hear of anything so silly?"

"Is it going to be formal?"

"Well, that certainly lets me out. I haven't a decent floor-length dress——"

"What's the matter with your violet organdie?"

"Oh THAT old thing. I've worn that everywhere. Honestly, I'd be arrested——"

"Well, there's your new black net——"

"I wore that to the Nitters' dance. People are sick of it. I tell you I'm simply not going."

"Well, I wouldn't care if I had a decent evening wrap."

"What's the matter with your white corded silk?"

"THAT; I wore THAT all last summer. Still, I suppose I COULD make it do . . . with my white lace . . . and some new, red sandals—wait, there's the telephone."

(Hello . . . Oh, Clara! . . . What? . . . Yes, but I'm not going . . . No, I haven't anything to wear . . . Why you have TOO! You've got scads of things . . . Don't be so silly . . . No, I heard the girls were going to wear floor-length dresses . . . Well, let me know what you find out.) . . . She's going to call May Flitt. Say, do you really think my white lace would be all right with some red sandals?"

"It would be MARVELOUS! Say, do you know what I might? Get a tulle cape for my black net."

"Well, if I only had some decent gloves—wait there's the telephone . . ."

(Hello Elsie? . . . What about Bess? . . . She isn't? How silly! Why she's got LOADS of clothes! . . . Your white chiffon! . . . It would be GRAND . . . All right . . . Good-by.)

"Can you beat that!"

"What?"

"Bess Gadsky says she isn't going because she hasn't anything to wear. Isn't that silly?"

"She always talks that way. She'll show up dressed like Mrs. Astor's horse."

Living With In-Laws Easy—If You Try

Woman Wed 20 Years Gets Job to Advise Brides.

"You can live happily with your in-laws if you make up your mind to co-operate with them."

That, anyway, is the belief of Mrs. Chester M. Offerman, of Yonkers, N. Y., wife of a trucking executive, who recently volunteered to give hints to honeymooners at Scaroon Manor, in the Adirondacks.

Answering an ad for "Happily Married Couple Wanted to Lecture Newlyweds Spending June at Scaroon Manor," Mrs. Offerman wrote to the manager that she and her husband could fulfill the qualifications, since they had been married for over 20 years and had been able to please in-laws the entire time.

Joseph Frieber, the bachelor, who runs the manor, gave as his explanation for seeking happily married couples as lecturers, this:

"Last June we had some 400 newlywed couples. Right away they started dividing up the brides with the other brides, the bridegrooms with other bridegrooms. Everybody was discussing in-laws. Don't you think we need someone this year to give them a good lecture?"

Don't Annoy by Poor Talk

HOW THE TELEPHONE does show up our conversation faults! Top of the list of telephone pests is the joke nuisance.

"Do ya know who this is?" screeches Gertie. "Aw, guess! Old Mrs. Wortz? You've got a crust! Sure it's Gertie! You said it!"

Poor Harry, who answered the phone, is politely trying to keep up his end of the chatter. But he'd have fled if he'd known it was Gertie calling. He had hoped it was Sue.

Last time Sue called she said, in that soft, delightful voice of hers, This is Sue, Harry. Have you a minute to talk? I wanted to tell you that the new aisle carpet for the church has come. There's a call for volunteers for Saturday. Count on you? That's fine. Lots of coffee, cakes and sandwiches for the tack-hammer crew! Thanks a lot, Harry. See you Saturday."

That's Sue. A real reason for her call, no silly guessing of identity, consideration for the other person's time, a gracious way of asking a favor.

Clever girls learn the art of talk. They speak easily, naturally, without cheap slang or silly "kidding." They seem to find plenty of pleasant, common things to talk about.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Letters selected to make up today's column include one from a self-styled idealistic young woman who would make the acquaintanceship of high type young men; another from a young woman who, speaking out of personal experience with heartbreak, offers constructive counsel to another correspondent who signed herself "Heartsick." The nature of the letters is such that they can be offered without further comment.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a business girl from the South and I find it rather hard to meet just the kind of persons one would wish to know. I am from a substantial old Southern Protestant family and am considered fairly good looking, even though a little past 30, and have held on to my ideals.

I love music, books, flowers, art, poetry (and having studied expression I used to give readings for young peoples' meetings at the church). I enjoy good movies and stage plays, am a lover of nature and enjoy getting out in the open where the birds sing and the flowers give me a message. I think Washington is lovely because here one may walk in the parks and there enjoy the birds, trees and flowers.

* * * *

I have always made worthwhile friends and have made a few such here, but in almost every case the young men I have met like to drink and I disapprove. I know there must be wholesome young men in their thirties here, who still hold to their early ideals which keep faith and love sweet.

* * * *

If Washington had a club for "Idealists" wouldn't it be grand to meet them? Your column is always enjoyed and I must say I was quite interested in the letter published May 7, written by a young man of 34, who signed himself "Idealist." I am just presumptuous enough to say I should like to meet him. I am giving you my name and telephone number, in case Mr. Idealist should happen to be interested. Sincerely, MISS THIRTY-TWO.

Advice to "Heartsick."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter from "Heartsick," the 22-year-old girl whom you advised in your column of April 21, tells a story so similar to my own experience that I should like to say a few things to her.

Two and a half years ago I was engaged to marry a man whom I loved more than I did my life. Suddenly I realized something was amiss; that we were gradually drifting apart. A few months later, after much heartache, I resigned my job and went to another place to work. Today I cannot say that I have completely forgotten—there is no such thing as forgetting—but time has altered my outlook on life and eased the pain somewhat.

* * * *

For a time when I was with other men, invariably I compared them with him. Today I accept each man as an individual in his own right and don't expect them to be like this man, nor to measure up to what I thought was the ideal which I believed I had found in him. Looking back on the situation objectively rather than sentimentally, I realize that he was my ideal at that time, but not the man who would be my ideal today.

* * * *

I can see now that I would never have found happiness with him because his love for me was so entirely selfish, and mutual love cannot exist where selfishness predominates in the nature of one or the other. The experience broke my heart it is true, but I realize now it was much better that things ended as they did; that we did not get married and realize the mistake afterward.

* * * *

In his kindly counsel to "Heartsick," published in your column of April 24, "C. W. F." spoke the truth about the value of finding some constructive and worthwhile hobby. After such an experience as ours, one must find some intellectually absorbing interest. If one is interested in music, develop one's talent in that field of self-expression.. If nursing happens to appeal, there is excellent opportunity for forgetting one's self in real service to humanity. Let "Heartsick" discover the most suitable hobby and lose herself in it. It will help her more than anything else to find herself again.

* * * *

Another bit of advice: don't isolate yourself, "Heartsick." Go places, meet new persons, become interested in their interests, and be a sympathetic listener to their problems. All these things are conducive to forgetting one's own heartache. I understand exactly what you are going through and it is agony. Let us both look forward to the future with a determination that we will survive this ordeal, and because of it be able to appreciate fully real love when it comes. It seems that in this day and age, lack of sincerity in friendship and love is entirely too prevalent. Keep your chin up, "Heartsick," and prove to your fickle sweetheart that if you cannot be happy for him and with him, that you can be happy in spite of him. Sincerely, ANN.

U. S. Farms Lag In Electric Use

Every farm in Holland uses electric current, according to the Rural Electrification Administration. In the United States one farm in 10 is served by an electric power line. Other ratios are 9 farms out of 10 electrified in Germany, half the farms electrified in Sweden, while in the Province of Ontario, Canada, only a slightly higher percentage of farms are electrified than in the United States.

American farmers make up for this in their use of automobiles, for the figures show that 6 out of every 10 farmers in America own an automobile. No other country in the world comes anywhere near to this proportion.

Today's HEALTH TALK

A Raw Milk Hazard.

Even though we should conquer completely (we can if we will) smallpox, diphtheria, syphilis and other widespread diseases, would we live forever? Of course we know we would not, for two obvious reasons at least. In the first place, living tissue is not everlasting. Its very nature of constant change—depletion and renewal—means that it will some day wear out. What we call ageing, regardless of the amount of figurative oil that may be used, will sooner or later exact its toll.

Caused by Goat Milk.

For several centuries an obscure fever had been prevalent along the shores of the Mediterranean. Little was known about it, but one thing was certain—it was not malaria. Its true character was not understood until David Bruce, an English army surgeon stationed on the Island of Malta, identified an organism as the cause of Malta or undulant fever. It was established that the disease followed the use of unpasteurized goat's milk. Boiling the milk or prohibiting its use showed a prompt decline in the number of cases.

Many cases are unrecognized because the symptoms are confused with typhoid fever, malaria, influenza, or tuberculosis. The Brucella bugs have a special fondness for young men, particularly those in rural districts. The onset is characterized by an afternoon or evening rise in temperature associated with chills and night sweats. As a rule, the patient feels well in the morning, but as the day progresses symptoms increase in severity. Occasionally the late afternoon or evening temperature may reach 104 to 105 degrees F. or even higher.

Boiling Is Prevention.

Unfortunately, the illness may be long drawn out. Less severe cases will recover in a week or two. Others may drag along for many months. In a few instances the infection has been known to exist for more than a year. Fatalities are not numerous. There is marked loss of weight and many patients complain of muscle and joint discomfort. In the early days of the disease a fair proportion of the victims will have abdominal pain, sufficiently severe to point to a diagnosis of appendicitis.

Prevention consists in boiling or pasteurizing milk from whatever source it may come. Inasmuch as the flesh of infected animals can convey the disease, certain precautions should be observed by meat handlers. A vaccine has been prepared that may be used with good effect.

How a Baby Grows

Sitting Part One

SITTING—A Halfway Station on the Road to Standing. Babies sit before they stand. It takes an entire year to attain the full, upright position. Sitting is a halfway stage. At first, the infant lies on his back. Then he begins to lift his head forward, but it wobbles and bobs. When he can firmly balance his head, at about 20 weeks, he may be placed in the sitting position for short periods. Pictured below, at the left, an 8-weeks-old baby is shown, much too young to sit. Next, at 12 weeks, back rounded. Then, at 16 weeks, the head begins to be steadier. And, in the last picture, at 20 weeks, the baby's body is much firmer. TOMORROW: Sitting, Part Two.

School Board To Map Play Aid Program

Educators Will Discuss Co-ordination Plan on Wednesday.

D. C. Recreation Group Proposal to Come Up at Meeting.

Long discussed plans to harness Washington's play and recreation facilities to a single, co-ordinated program, may be brought to sharp focus this week by the board of education.

Before it lies a specific proposal of the District of Columbia Recreation Committee, and debate, expected at the board's meeting Wednesday afteroonn, will disclose to what extent the board cares to co-operate with other Government agencies in making such a program effective.

The plan was submitted to the board at its last meeting by Henry I. Quinn, the board's representative on the recreation committee. While its general objectives are expected to meet board approval, there will be several debatable details.

To Discuss Jurisdiction.

One point of discussion will be jurisdiction of school playgrounds, which under the plan would be offered the recreation committee for specified uses.

While members of the board have, for example, expressed themselves in favor of keeping playgrounds open for supervised play after school hours, they are gonig to ask whether the schools or the committee will be responsible for the grounds, the school building and the children during that time.

There is also the question of expense. The committee has proposed that the additional expense, incurred by the new set-up be prorated among the Board of Commissioners, the Board of Education and the office of National Capital Parks, Buildings and Reservations—the three agencies represented on the recreation committee.

According to the plan the gross amount to be prorated shall not exceed $4,500. Each agency would be expected to set aside $1,500 from its appropriations to be expended for purposes stipulated by the recreation committee.

Must Decide Power

The board must reach a decision on its power to allocate such a fund.

The District of Columbia Recreation Committee, as now organized, proposes to be the policy determining body for its member agencies. It would consider such organizations as the department of playgrounds, the community center department, the recreation division of the office of the National Capital Parks, Buildings and Reservations, as "Associated Departments of Play and Recreation for the District of Columbia."

The co-ordinator of recreation, who now draws his salary from the office of National Capital Parks, Buildings and Reservations, would serve as coordinator of recreation and ex-officio secretary and executive officer for the committee and its associated departments. He would be the committee's administrative officer.

The committee expects to use the supervisors of health and physical education for the white and colored public schools as assistants to the executive in charge of the playground and playfield division of the associated departments. It would make them responsible for the direction and supervision, on school properties, of all programs directed by this division.

Central Office Plan.

This proposal also will be among the concerns of the board of education, as will another to set up a central office in a "neutral" building.

The committee has stressed the importance of "close relationship" between the community play and recreation program and the community education program, if the principles of progressive play and education are to be integrated.

"This is particularly true of activities which meet the play needs of the school age child and are therefore accepted as having educational value and as a vital part of his educational experience," the committee report points out.

Upon receiving the proposal two weeks ago the board referred it to Dr. Ballou for study and report. His report will be heard before the plan is brought before the board for discussion and action.

Group to Support Youth Bill Planned

A committee, which plans to organize church youth groups throughout the city to support the American youth bill now before Congress, will be formed at a meeting tonight in National City Christian Church.

Several of the church societies will be represented on the comittee, which has been indorsed by the Rev. J. Raymond Mills, assistant pastor at National City Christian Church; Dr. Harry Woolever, editor of the National Methodist Press; Dorothy Detzer, of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, and the Rev. D. J. Jernagin, pastor of Mount Carmel Baptist Church.

David Carliner, temporary secretary of the committee, will open the meeting at 8 p. m.

Flood Aid Laws Will Be Sought By Unit Today

500 From States Hit by High Water to Demand U. S. Legislation.

A small army of business men and municipal officials from States struck by the March flood will meet in the Senate Office Building today to demand Federal flood-control legislation.

Under leadership of William B. Rodgers, president of the "Tri-State Authority," approximately 500 delegates from New England, New York State, Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky are expected to attend.

The Tri-State Authority, of which Rodgers is head, is composed of local committees from Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia. It was set up to organize attempts to obtain flood-control legislation.

There will also be representatives from the Flood Conrtol Council of central and southern New York, from the New York State Flood Control Commission, and from the Ohio Valley Conservation and Flood Control Congress.

The flood control seekers' march on Washington originated with the Tri-State Authority, which has been active since last March in attempting to organize control activity.

Impetus was given the Authority, however, by the Allegheny County League of Women Voters. At a meeting shortly over a week ago, the women decided the only way to get flood control legislation was to come to Washington and ask for it. Members of the Tri-State Authority decided to come along and other organizations with similar objectives joined the movement.

The meeting is but a day before the Copeland flood-control bill comes up for debate in the Senate. The entire Senate, the House Flood Control Committee and Representatives from States hit by the flood have been invited to attend the meeting today.

Rep. Lewis Details Social Security Act

Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland, last night said that the social security legislation, of which he was co-sponsor, is neither a moral nor an economic substitute for the right to work.

"We must provide this right to work," he told 150 guests at the annual province dinner of Pi Gamma Mu, national honor society in the social sciences, "with as effective and comprehensive legal sanctions as now protect man's right of property."

Col. Raymond O. Barton, U. S. A., another speaker, defended R. O. T. C. training in colleges, saying that it teaches leadership and decision. The Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, president of Georgetown University, and several score Washington students and teachers were inducted into the fraternity. Dr. James J. Hayden,

It was a twentieth century Noah's Ark that perched astride the railroad tracks at dawn. Everything was there but Noah and the pair of white mice that sailed the great flood with him and the great-grandparents of all the animals in the show.

Washington is the fourth city Barnum, Bailey & Ringling Bros. have played this season. It comes directly from Brooklyn for shows here today and tomorrow—afternoon and night performances.

The Case of Jimmy.

By late afternoon the tents were up. A spring breeze blew the canvas into seas and swirled dust into the eyes of 10,000 Washingtonians who had come for a preview.

Old men with one foot in the grave were there. And children two steps out of the cradle. You see, the circus never loses its glamour. Like Christmas it's one of those things that never loses its fascination.

Take Jimmy. He's 9 now—a tousled-haired grammar school kid. When he's old and his hair is gray he will look back on yesterday. He will smile and go to another circus almost like the one here now and remember the days of his youth.

Jimmy spent a sleepless night. Almost like the night before Christmas. He dreamed of wild animals, the painted clowns, the acrobats, the beautiful girls and the horses.

He wanted to go to the circus—awful bad.

Threw Eggs in Face.

But Jimmy had a nickel. And that's all the money he had.

All day long he hung around. He watched the sweating band of men and horses raise the two big tents. He was there when Bessie had the jitters and wouldn't eat her eggs.

Bessie is an orangutan—a sad-faced old girl who's very blase and tired of life. Jimmy laughed heartily as he watched her frown and fling the eggs back into the keeper's face.

His eyes grew wide with wonder as he watched the three midget elephants—attraction of the show—shamble up to the menagerie tent.

He craned his neck to peer up at the giraffes. And wondered why dromedaries have humps on their backs. He ran from the frisky zebras and waited until the last animal was stored in the big menagerie tent.

Peeped Under Tent.

Finally Jimmy crept to the ground. He lifted up the flap of the tent. Jimmy just had to see.

He was lost in the wonders of the circus inside, of all the strange animals. Jimmy was lost in thought. A hand heavy as a mortgage fell on his shoulder:

"Whatcha doin' there son?"

Jimmy's heart pounded against his sweater. It was really his only chance.

Jimmy had just a nickel.

Just Wanted to See.

Jimmy looked up and almost cried.

He handed it to Jimmy. "Go to the circus tomorrow, son," he said.

A smile almost swallowed Jimmy's sun-burned face. He couldn't say anything but:

Jimmy never will forget it—not if he lives to be a 100.

19 Are Hurt In D. C. Area Auto Mishaps

Washington Woman Seriously Injured When Cars Collide.

Many Others Suffer Cuts, Bruises; Neck of Negro Broken.

Nineteen persons, several of them Washingtonians, were injured in traffic accidents in the Capital and nearby Virginia yesterday. A Washington motorist was held on hit-and-run charges following an accident in Alexandria.

Seriously hurt in separate mishaps were Mrs. Grace Williams, 53, of 1426 M street northwest, and Ernest Austin, 31, of Fredericksburg, Va. Both were treated at Emergency Hospital.

Pinned Under Car.

Austin, according to authorities, was the driver of a car that sideswiped another driven by Lawrence Ledger, 28, of 911 Jefferson street northwest. The Austin car, which was carrying three other passengers, overturned, pinning the driver underneath. He suffered chest injuries.

With him were Mrs. Betty Austin, 28, who suffered cuts of the scalp and shoulder; Louise Brauer, 25, abrasions of the knees; and Karl Ulman, 41, lacerations of the scalp and ribs. All were treated at Emergency Hospital.

Ledger was treated there also for head and leg cuts.

Charged with running down 70-year-old Walter R. Newlon, retired Alexandria (Va.) antique dealer, and then fleeing the scene of the accident, John Harrell, 21, of 513 Florida avenue, was released on a $500 bond by Alexandria police yesterday.

Arrested After Chase.

Harrell was arrested by two policemen, who took up the chase, and forced his car off the road on Richmond highway, within a mile of Potomac yards near which Newlon was struck down. The accident occurred shortly after midnight Saturday as the aged Alexandrian was crossing the highway on foot.

Newlon was treated in Alexandria Hospital for a broken collar bone, a possible rib fracture and lacerations. He was later released.

A telephone call to Alexandria police headquarters led to Harrell's capture. Capt. John S. Arnold, of the Alexandria police, and C. B. Presley, of the Virginia State police, answered the call and took up the chase.

Mrs. Mae A. Nayfel, 29, and her son, Louis, 5, of Baltimore, were treated at Mount Alto Hospital for cuts and shock when the automobile she was riding in with her husband was in collision at Reno road and Fessenden street northwest.

Reckless Driving Charged.

Ashton A. Davis, 50, of Indian Head, Md., was treated at Providence Hospital here for a fractured leg and internal injuries when he was knocked down while walking near his home.

Lillian A. Schiller, 22, of Takoma Park, Md., received a severe cut on her cheek when the car she was riding in collided with another at Connecticut avenue and Garfield street northwest. She was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Herman Gillis, colored, 35, of 472 O street northwest, was cut on the arm when he was struck, while crossing New Jersey avenue at O street, by a car driven by Grove T. Merrick, 22, of 6211 Twelfth street northwest. Gillis was treated at Freedmen's Hospital.

Thelma Torney, 19, of 1020 South Carolina avenue southeast, was seriously injured when the car in which she was riding with Robert Small, 26, of 4829 Ninth street northwest, crashed into a cement culvert on Baltimore boulevard near Laurel, Md. Miss Torney was taken to Sibley Hospital, where she was treated for a possible fracture of the skull, possible fracture of the nose, and lacerations of the upper lip.

Paul Ketchum Appointed.

Paul F. Ketchum, a student at Duke University and son of the Rev. Irving W. Ketchum, 3019 Forty-fifth street northwest, has been appointed conference director of the Durham (N. C.) Y. M. C. A., it was learned yesterday.

Washington Real Estate Boom Predicted by Prophet of 1933

ROY WENZLICK.

Roy Wenzlick, of St. Louis, who warned realtors, bankers and life insurance companies of the dark days to come in the real estate business in 1933, came to Washington yesterday with the prediction that an immediate boom is inevitable.

In Washington, he said, this prosperous era already is far advanced, but the activity here can be charted as the finger that points the way to rush business for communities throughout the United States. The upward trend in real estate transactions will lift the building industry to heights, which by 1938, may be unprecedented in America's history, he declared.

Wenzlick brought with him a copy of his new book, "The Coming Boom in Real Estate and What to Do About It," in which he lists 10 reasons why he believes the depression is over for realtors. The reasons are based on findings the author has made as president of Real Estate Analysts, Inc., and as research consultant for the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

"Why the interest that has been shown in this book—judging from sales—is in itself an indication of the widespread appeal of the subject," Wenzlick said in an interview yesterday.

Washington already is building half as many dwellings as it did during its last peak, according to the analyst. Other communities, taken as a whole, while doing more business than previously, are doing one-tenth the building they were during the most recent crest.

"During the last boom you were building 70 houses a month here for every 10,000 families in your population," he said. "Now you are building about 35.

"Washington is not at all typical of communities through the country. If it were, then my book predicting a boom should have been written two or three years ago. But as it is, other cities are at this moment experiencing only a mild increase in activity."

Government building has accentuated the rising trend here, and placed Washington in the lead, but slowly and surely the other cities will follow suit. The ten reasons that make his prediction "not guess work, but science," he said, are:

1. Better business conditions will provide bigger incomes, more employment, an accelerated marriage rate, and less doubling up of families.

2. For six years there has been insufficient building to offset the amount of demolition.

3. No building in recent years has provided for the natural growth of population.

4. Desirable residential vacancies in urban districts have been absorbed by the recovery thus far.

5. New buildings cannot be completed rapidly enough to counteract the shortage that will develop in the next five years.

6. This shortage will cause a sharp advance in rents.

7. Real estate paying a high return on investment will advance in price.

8. Foreclosures will drop rapidly as interest and principal payments can be met out of current income.

9. Mortgage money, without the need of Government agencies, will be plentiful.

10. As real estate advances in price it will eventually reach a point where it will be as cheap to build a house, as to buy one already built.

Wenzlick spent five months of 1933 in Washington as a consultant in the drafting of construction and real estate NRA codes. At that time, he recalled yesterday, he held out little hope for an immediate pickup in real estate, but had predicted activity would be in full swing by 1938.

Police Seek Trio In 2 Holdups Here

Police are searching for three Negroes, who early yesterday held up and robbed two men and escaped with $134 in loot.

Vincent M. Teano, of 1117 Eighth street northwest, manager of the City Cab Garage, 2303 Fourteenth street northwest, was robbed of $125 by two Negroes who entered the place and threatened him with guns.

Teano told police he was alone in the building at the time and that the men, both well dressed, drew guns from their pockets and rifled the cash register. Both bandits ran west on Florida avenue, he said.

Grover C. Scott, 42, of 1116 Ninth street northwest, reported to police he was held up by a Negro as he was entering his home. He said the man threatened him with a gun and took $9 from his pockets. He described his assailant as being 20 to 30 years old, wearing a brown suit and hat.

Labor Rights Will Be Told In WPA Book

Catechism Will Outline Benefits to Relief Workers.

Boost for Government's Aid Programs to Be Urged.

Further indication that the Administration intends to stand by its work relief program through the Presidential election was revealed yesterday with the revelation that a work relief catechism is being prepared for distribution to all relief workers on WPA rolls.

At numerous points the catechism emphasizes the work relief aspect of the program as in the reply to the question: "When I take a Government job am I still on relief?"

The handbook answer is: "No; you are off relief. You are working."

The catechism also concedes the workers' rights to appeal to local WPA officials in case of "unfair dismissal," to complain "about wages, hours and other things," to send a representative or delegate to present grievances to WPA officials, to bargain collectively, to refuse to work in dangerous places, or in water without wearing boots, and to report unsafe conditions and defective tools to their foreman.

Rights Outlined.

On the question of leaving WPA projects for private employment the catechism offers this advice:

"Q. Suppose I get a chance to work at something besides a Govment job, should I take it?

"A. If the job pays substandard wages, or has bad working conditions, you do not have to take it."

Another series of questions and answers reveals that workers are entitled to complain if they think their projects are wasteful, or "to tell the world about it" if they consider them worthwhile.

"Q. What if I think the project I am working on is a waste of money, can I complain about it?

"A. Yes, you should complain, because you are helping pay for it; second, because you have a right to your own self-respect.

"Q. If I think the work is valuable do I have the right to tell the world?

"A. Yes, if your union or your group wants to hold a celebration when the project is finished, your supervisor will help you plan it, and you can invite other citizens to come and see it. If it is a school, the school board should help. If it is a park, the park commissioner will help. If it is a road or sewer or waterworks system the officials of these systems will help. You have added wealth to your community that no depression can take away."

The catechism closes with:

"There may be a lot of things about any big program that we don't like. No matter how hard we try on any big job, something unexpected turns up. The only people who don't make mistakes are those who do nothing at all. Such people generally stand around and tell how things ought to be done. The WPA is a great national enterprise to get something done. Mistakes may be made in the future, too, but we can be sure the American people will not make the mistake of doing nothing."

Linke Pitches Away Nats' Lead in 9th to Give Detroit 8-7 Game

Relief Hurler Hands Tilt To Tigers

Kress and Simmons Get Home Runs; 33,000 See Game.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Detroit, May 17.—Relief Pitcher Ed Linke, of the Nats, afforded instant relief to the Detroit Tigers went into the ninth inning suffering from an acute shortage of runs.

Dr. Linke had recently entered the scene after Jack Russell was withdrawn for a pinch hitter earlier in the inning when the Nats had late this afternoon when the Tigers taken a 7-6 lead. With 33,000 impatient Detroit fans imploring the Tigers to rally from the shadows, Dr. Linke prescribed the following cure:

One base on balls to Mickey Cochrane, one two-base hit to Charley Gehringer that sent Cochrane's runner to third, one long fly to centerfield by Goose Goslin that scored the tying run and sent Gehringer to third; one intentional pass to Al Simmons, one moderately long fly to leftfield by Gerald Walker that scored Gehringer with the winning run.

It was all very painless and the Tigers won the ball game, 8 to 7.

Nats Break Tie.

In their own half of the ninth, the Nats had broken a 6-6 tie and appeared in a fair way toward winning the ball game, which was a very wild affair from the outset.

Johnny Stone batted for Jack Russell and drew a base on balls from Chad Kimsey, the third Tiger pitcher, to launch proceedings. He advanced to second while Kimsey was throwing Jesse Hill out, and he got to third when Buddy Lewis beat out a slow hit to Gehringer. Jake Powell slammed a grounder at Clifton, who forced Lewis at second base, but when Powell beat the relay to first to avoid a double play, Stone scored with what had seemed to be an important run.

Russell couldn't hold a 6-3 lead that the Nats went out and got for him against young Joe Sullivan, the Tiger southpaw who started the game. After the Tigers had collected three runs from Russell in the first inning, the Nats responded with four in the second and added two more in the third, when Red Kress smacked a home run over the leftfield fence.

Simmons Hits Homer.

But the Tigers retrieved a run in the third and while Roxie Lawson and Kimsey were shutting the Nats out, they tied the score at 6-6 with two more off Russell in the seventh. That was the state of affairs when the two ball teams went into the ninth and only one of 'em came out of it with any profit.

That Detroit first inning was a very disorderly affair. Clifton began the game by beating out a hit to Travis and Cochrane drew the first of his three walks after Clifton was out stealing. Gehringer singled to center and Cochrane scored when Travis attempted to complete a double play on Goslin's grounder by throwing wildly past Kuhel. At this point, Al Simmons calmly lifted one of Russell's pitches over the leftfield fence to score Gehringer ahead of him.

Young Lawson, who had beaten the Nats, 10-1, in Washington, was off to a shaky start in the second inning when he walked Travis and Kress. Kuhel scored one run with a double against the right centerfield wall, Millies drove in another by slamming a single off Owen's glove, and Jesse Hill made it 4-3 with a well-socked double to right.

Again a base on balls put Russell in trouble in the third, and again it was Cochrane who drew it. He

Home Town Frog Makes Good for Jumping Title

By the United Press.

Angeles Camp, Calif., May 17.—The frog that kept the citizens of Angeles Camp awake for many nights with his croaking won the annual Calaveras jumping from contest today.

The winner was "Can't Take It," the entry of Roy Weimer, of Angeles Camp.

The victory of the home-town product was extraordinarily popular, for "Outlanders" have been carrying off the top prize in recent years. "Can't Take It" took the money by jumping 12 feet 3 inches.

A "Furriner" finished second—the frog Jack Dalton entered by the Will Rogers' ranch of Oklahoma. His best leap was 12 feet 2 inches.

Discovery, another home-town product entered by Joe Mendalo, took third money with 11 feet 11 inches. The fourth and final prize went to Red Can V, whose owner is Elwin Lillie, of Angeles Camp. His jump was 11 feet 4 inches.

It was the closet Angels Camp has come to a clean sweep in the famed contest it sponsors annually to commemorate the first frog jumping contest in the old mining camp, a contest made historic by Mark Twain's story of the Jumping Frog of the Calaveras.

"Can't Take It" made his winning leap yesterday in the trials. It stood against the assault of several hundred assorted frogs from North Carolina, Mexico, Oklahoma and the Pacific Northwest.

Each frog was given one minute to leave the starting line. Then he was allowed three consecutive leaps. The distance covered in the third leap represented his score.

Some of the frogs never left the starting mark, giving rise to suspicions that today as nearly 75 years ago some one might have fed the amphibians a spoonful of buckshot to weigh them down. Anxious owners shook, weighed, jolted the steadfast ones, but prodding never moved them.

Fred Acres Finishes 2d In Archery Tournament

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., May 17 — Fred Acres jr., of the Potomac Archers Club, of Washington, D. C., finished second in the Double American tournament of the Baltimore Oriole Archers Club here today. He was topped by Bob Morse, of Lancaster, Pa.

In winning runner-up honors Acres gained a membership in the National Archery Association's Six Golds Club. To become a member of the club the archer must put all six of his arrows in the gold—a feat much rarer than a hole-in-one in golf.

Two Red Sox Homers Beat Chicago

Werber, R. Ferrell Hit Circuit Drives to Win, 8 to 7.

McNair Leads Attack for Winners With Two Singles, Double.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 17.—Home runs by Bill Werber and Rick Ferrell gave the Boston Red Sox an 8-to-7 victory and their fourth triumph this year over the Chicago White Sox today in the opener of the series.

More than 23,000 fans saw the Boston team come from behind in the eighth to tie the score on Werber's homer and then go ahead in the ninth with Ferrell's circuit smash.

The Red Sox drove Johnny Whitehead from the box and were on the long end of a 6-to-1 score going into the last half of the fourth. But the Chicago team knocked out Jim Henry in the fourth with two runs and then went ahead by one run when they pounced on Ostermueller for four runs in the sixth.

Eric McNair led the Red Sox attack with a double and two singles. "Mule" Haas and Luke Sewell each had two hits in four trips for the White Sox.

Babe Phelps relieved Whitehead and gave up five hits after his predecessor had yielded six. The Comiskey team made eight hits off Henry, Ostermueller and Jack Wilson. Johnny Marcum pitched the last two innings and refused to give up a hit to the Chicago team.

Browns Win A Game of Baseball

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 17.—The battered St. Louis Browns returned to the victory column for the second time in the last 19 games by hammering out an 8-to-5 triumph over the Philadelphia Athletics today in a series opener played before 4,100 Sunday fans.

Ross, Philadelphia recruit right-hander, was jerked after he issued bases on balls to four of the first five men who faced him. A well-placed triple by Jim Bottomley brought in three of the four Brownie runs in the first-inning onslaught and the veteran first baseman came in with the other tally on Sam West's single.

Julius Solters broke a 5-5 tie in the seventh with a home run. Elon Hogsett, St. Louis hurler, was touched freely in the opening innings, but held the Athletics to a single hit in the last four frames.

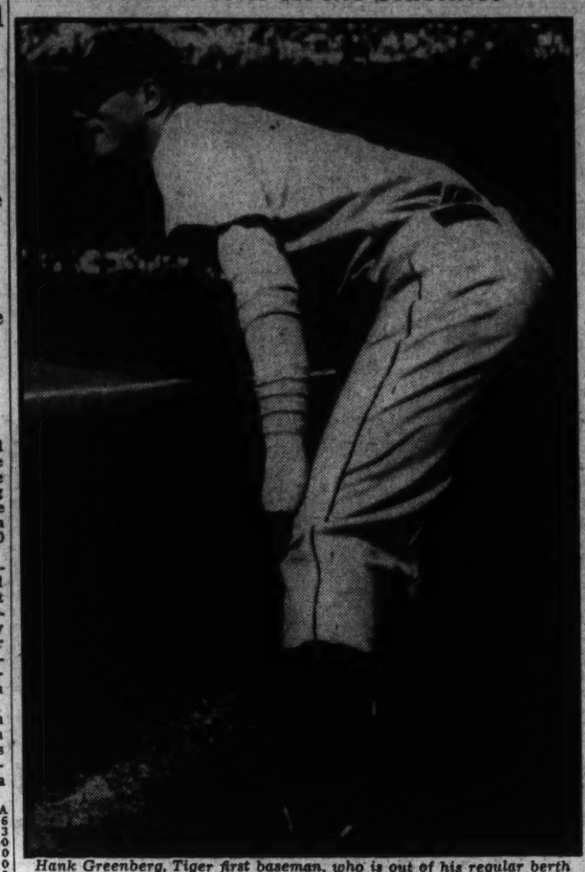
Hank Works on the Sidelines



Hank Greenberg, Tiger first baseman, who is out of his regular berth because of an injured arm, does a bit of coaching in Detroit's game against Washington yesterday.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Detroit, Mich., May 17.

THE Detroit Tigers probably never will be able to thank me sufficiently for this piece, which constitutes the best break Mickey Cochrane's club has received since the rest of the league broke down and permitted the Tigers to win two pennants in a row.

As I was saying, the Tigers probably never will be able to express fittingly their appreciation of what I am about to say, but this department was never the one to wait on applause. So, without further ado, I am doing the Tigers the favor of predicting that:

They are going no place in the American League in general this year and, as far as brass tacks are concerned, they ain't gonna win the pennant.

And if that isn't smoothing the path for the Tigers to go out and win their third straight American League championship, Mussolini is the apostle of peace and Selassie is the civil governor of Rome.

POVICH.

Just in case any Detroit fans are alarmed at what I am doing, I insert the reminder that I'm the guy who picked Spain in the war of '98; got down heavily on Hoover to beat Roosevelt in '32, and parlayed Primo Carnera, Kingfish Levinsky and Max Baer against Joe Louis. I almost won that last one. All of 'em finished second.

But I can't see the Tigers with a gross of rose-colored spectacles. The other clubs in the league—the Red Sox, the Yankees and the Indians—are too tough, and the Tigers ain't what they used to be. In fact, I don't like the Tigers at all.

Of course, I am typing this piece with one eye on the American League standings which, I am careful to note, reveal that the Tigers are in fifth place with only 14 wins in 28 games, for a .500 average. But I wouldn't like 'em right now, even if they were leading the league.

Methinks that a fine state of decadence has set in on the two-time pennant winners. The infield trouble that they artfully dodged while they were winning pennants in '34 and '35 is now, apparently deluged 'em. In two of the four spots where they were potent in the infield, strange faces are now performing for the Tigers. I mean that Hank Greenberg and Bill Rogell are missing from the line-up.

Greenberg will be out of the game for at least another month with his broken left wrist which is still in a cast, and Jack Burns must play at first base. Burns, even my enemies will admit, is no Greenberg. And at shortstop, where the capable Rogell was a powerful package for two years, little Flea Clifton is now holding forth because Rogell has succeeded in hitting only .193 in 26 games.

Since he has been in the line-up, Clifton has batted for the grand average of .085, and at best is only a .250 hitter. But other Tigers are also in a woeful batting slump. Gerald Walker is batting .188, Pete Fox is on the bench with his .235 average, Cochrane is hitting only .265 and Owen .272. Simmons has brought only a current .284 average to the team and the only regulars now hitting more than .300 are Goslin, with .340, and Gehringer with .356.

Burns, Greenberg's substitute, is hitting .280, which is in striking contrast with the .348 figure compiled by Greenberg before Jake Powell crashed him out of the line-up in Washington, and if you don't think the Tigers are missing Greenberg's run-producing bat, then look at the left-on-base figures which resemble the mutuels at Charles Town.

And it is certainly a fine state of affairs with Mickey Cochrane's once proud pitching staff when Vic Sorrell, who was considered a washed-up hurler in 1934, is leading all the team's pitchers with four victories and one defeat. Schoolboy Rowe, the big shot of the staff, has won only three games and lost two, and Tommy Bridges, the No. 2 pitcher, has won only two of six decisions. Elden Auker has only won two in five.

No, as I was saying, I don't like the Tigers to win the pennant. When Jake Powell barged into Greenberg and put him out of the line-up for two months, and the following day hit Cochrane himself with a foul tip that kept Cochrane out of the game for five days, during which the team went into a nose dive, it did the Tigers' pennant chances no good at all.

At that the Tigers do have one chance to win the pennant, perhaps. They could buy Powell from the Washington Club—and then shoot him.

East's Fastest Swimmers in Record Field for Meet Here Tonight

82 to Compete In Olympic Aid Event

By John R. Vosburgh.

Featuring the appearance of the world's fastest swimmer, young Peter Fick, of the New York A. C., and a fast women's field, including some of the East's foremost mermaids, the District A. A. U. will conduct a mammoth swim meet tonight at the Shoreham pool for the benefit of the United States Olympic fund.

The event is bringing out the largest field in the sports history here, numbering a total of 82 individuals from New York, Philadelphia, Camden, N. J., Baltimore, Staunton, Va., Woodstock, Va., and Washington. Fick, who is attending Staunton Military Academy, but representing the New York Club, will race in the 50-yard, 100-yard, and 200-yard free-style events.

The husky youngster, who recently swam the fastest 100 yards ever done in competition, tying the mark of 51 flat, set by Johnny Weissmuller in exhibition, will get his toughest battle in the 200-yard test. Irving McCaffrey, of Massanutten Military Academy, holder of the National Interscholastic 220-yard championship, is entered in the same events and also in the century.

In the latter, however, and in the 50, Otto Schaffhauser, of the Broadwood A. C., Philadelphia, is figured to be Fick's chief worry, if any.

Olympic Contenders to Vie.

Topping the field in the women's events will be comely Dorothy Forbes, of Camden, N. J., and Marie Glazier, of Philadelphia, who are waging a close fight in an effort to make the Olympic team. Miss Forbes recently beat Miss Glazier, who represents the Penn A. C., by a hand in Philadelphia in the 100-yard free style. They will meet at the same distance tonight.

Florence Peck, of the Penn A. C., will be entered in the same event but this other Philadelphia star's chief threat will be in the 100-yard breast-stroke in which she will run up against Washington's Margaret Hoffman, a member of the Olympic team in 1932.

John Lang, of Massanutten Military Academy, National Interscholastic diving champion, will meet Johnny Broaddus, District champion, who has come out of retirement for the occasion.

A total of 15 events are on the program. Men's events are the 50-yard, 100-yard and 200-yard free-style, 100-yard backstroke and the breast-stroke, 200-yard relay and high-board diving. Boys 17 and under will compete in the 50-yard freestyle and breast-stroke; girls under 14, in the 50-yard freestyle, and women in the 50-yard and 100-yard freestyle, 100-yard back-stroke, 100-yard breast-stroke and back-stroke and high-board diving.

National City League games of The Washington Post Sandlot Association drew thousands of fans out yesterday as Section A and Section B continued their championship races. Close to 4,000, including Clark Griffith, owner of the Nationals, swarmed around the South Ellipse to see the Heurich Brewers beat Miller Furniture, 8 to 4.

Griffith was particularly interested in the performance of young Archie Schrivener, slim southpaw hurler, who was on the mound for the Brewers. The proprietor of the ball park was accompanied by his chief scout, Joe Engle.

Schrivener was impressive in pitching the Brewers to their sixth successive victory and second straight triumph. A six-run uprising in the second inning sent Pitcher Carl Wahler, of the Furniture team, scurrying to the showers. Singles by Thompson, Russell, Scrivener, Bennie, Collier and Shelton combined with a walk and an error to give the Brewers the half dozen counters.

Scrivener allowed but eight scattered hits. Lyman McAboy, Furniture third baseman, capped a seventh inning rally when he singled over second, scoring Boyce and F. Wahler.

Blue Flames Wins.

The Blue Flame Valets performed in true championship style in shutting out Shady Grove Barbecue, 10 to 0, on the East Ellipse. The strong Barbecuers found Talburt's pitching for but eight hits. The Blue Flame's 19 hits increased the stock of the city Sunday champions for their next Sunday's game with the Berwers. Lewis with five for four for the Flames was his team's leading stickmen with Lennie Roberts of the Barbecuers enjoying a perfect day at bat with two singles and two doubles.

The Union Printers won a 10-inning battle from the Woodman of the World Elm Camp in West Potomac Park, 9 to 8. Fred Waple scored the winning run when he walked, took second on the Rev. McPherson's sacrifice and scored on Bill Boundford's single to left. Cullens of the Woodmen put the Elms in the ball game in the sixth with a homer to deep center with the bases loaded.

In the fourth, Section A game, the Dixie Pigs took the measure of the Plaza Wine and Liquor Co., 6 to 2, with Buddy Nau's hitting, and fielding, Babe Clapper's hitting and Lefty Joe Sullivan's five-hit pitching contributing to the triumph at Riverdale Field.

Ellen Kincaid Will Play For Congressional

Ellen Kincaid, 17-year-old Beaver Dam champion, youngest player ever to win a District club title, has joined Congressional Country Club and will play with the Congressional women's first team tomorrow at Indian Spring.

Miss Kincaid celebrated the change from Beaver Dam to the Congressional Club by shooting an 85 yesterday while playing with Helen Dettweiler, club record holder; her brother, Billy, and Frank Goodwin. Miss Dettweiler shot an 83.

Kenwood Golfers Reach Finals in Handicap Team Matches

Beaver Dam Bows in Md. Title Play

Victor Will Meet Chevy Chase for Right to Play for Title.

By Dave Herman.

Running true to form, Kenwood Golf and Country Club reached the finals of the District division of the Maryland State handicap team championship yesterday by defeating Beaver Dam Country Club, 12½ to 5½ on the Kenwood course.

Kenwood will meet Chevy Chase next Sunday, and the wniner of this match will engage the winner of the Baltimore division for the title.

Levi Yoder and Russ Hollebaugh, number one Kenwood team, won from John R. Miller and Martin F. McCarthy, Beaver Dam aces, scoring 2 points to 1, while Charlie Cole and Bernie Hallock, of Kenwood, captured 2½ points from Jess Baggett and Max Taylor.

Kenwood won five of the six matches, two by clean sweeps. C. Hackman and A. Smith, of Beaver Dam, turned in Beaver Dam's lone triumph, taking three points from Tom Goode and Eddie Boyd.

Hollebaugh and Yoder scored 74's each, Hollebaugh setting a dizzy pace with an outgoing nine of 34. Cole and Hallock teamed beautifully, clicking off a best ball of 68, two under par.

Results:

Charlie Cole and Bernie Hallock (Kenwood), 2½; Jean Baggett and Max Taylor (Beaver Dam), ½.

Dick Weaver and Buddy Tew (Kenwood), 3; John Money and D. Henderson (Beaver Dam), 0.

C. Hackman and A. Smith (Beaver Dam), 3; Tom Goode and Eddie Boyd (Benwood), 0.

T. L. Bailey, with 80—21—59, won the Jack Nichols Trophy tournament at Kenwood, and a handicap slicing party at his expense will be held by Chairman Sam Bond and his committee this week. Carl D. Gnam, 80—13—67 and R. W. Harvey, 83—16—67, tied for second.

Sensational birdies on the thirteenth and fourteenth holes enabled Roland Mackenzie, professional, and his star amateur partner, Roger Peacock, to defeat Danny and Alan Burton, Army and Navy Country Club pros, 2 and 1, yesterday at the Army and Navy course.

All even at the turn, all square leaving the twelfth green, Mackenzie holed a 15-footer for a birdie four at the 504-yard thirteenth as his team went one up.

On the fourteenth, a 373-yarder, Peacock hit a bad drive, knocked his brassie second 40 yards over the green, and then saw his third shot bound crazily over the bank smack into the hole for a birdie 3. Burton, only one to reach the green in 2, failed to sink his putter.

The Burtons won the third, their opponents the fifth and seventh and the Burtons knotted the count at the ninth with a par 3. Mackenzie and Danny Burton had 76's, each, and Peacock and Alan Burton 78's each.

Al Treder, Manor professional, shot a 68, two under par, in a match with Harry Pitt, J. F. McBride and George F. Jones. Treder had a brace of 34's.

George McGehee, not content with his eagle deuce on the 318-yard fifth of the inside nine at Manor Friday, came back yesterday to hole a nice one for an eagle three on the ninth, a 454-yarder.

Mel Shorey, East Potomac pro, reeled off a 71, one over par, with a couple of three putt greens yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club, teaming with Reese Hair to defeat Leo Walper, pro, and Frank Williams, 2 and 1. Walper shot a 72.

Extra! Elmer Jenkins broke 80 for the first time at Washington. He shot a 77, playing with Bob Leedy, R. B. Ley and A. T. Hesler. Jenkins had two three-putt greens.

Martin F. McCarthy, Eddie Bean and John R. Miller, with 37's, each, tied for the medal in the miniature golf tournament at Beaver Dam. Match play begins next Sunday.

"Opening Day" was celebrated at Woodmont Country Club, with a dress parade in the form of freakish costumes the feature. Among those who provoked rounds of laughter were Willard Goldheim, Ed Engleman, Art Newman, Jess Miller, Mrs. Theodore Peyser, and Mrs. L. B. Schloss.

eventually scored when Simmons and Walker slammed out singles with two out, and the score was 6-4.

From the third to the ninth, the Nats were held scoreless, getting only three hits off Lawson and Kimsey. Lawson was forced to leave the game when he hurt his pitching hand deflecting a drive by Russell in the sixth inning.

It was all very sudden in the seventh, when the Tigers tied the score. With one out, Cochrane singled to left, Gehringer singled to right, Goslin singled to center, and Al Simmons pulled a squeeze bunt that scored Gehringer from third with the run that made it 6-6.

Eventually came the ninth, but why repeat that.

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

Old man mileage seems to make a big difference to many an angler, unfortunately. In recent years anglers by the hundreds, have phoned to ask, where can I get good fishing close to the city?"

We always try to oblige by giving the best fishing grounds available in near waters. Sooner or later we learn that a party had a very poor trip, bad weather, poor bait, wrong tide, the skipper went to sleep, or the fish were not biting, etc. However, in all cases your correspondent asks for the amount of time that the party can spare because this is most important—fish don't stay put, usually they are where they are hardest to find.

Some get them—others fail. Always there is a genuine reason behind both. For instance—there are a great many places where one can find beautiful fishing water near the city—but water regardless of its clarity does not always contain fish because it is either too brakish, a lack of food, or too many boats operating in too small an area and over too long a period.

As a boy we found that the further one traveled from civilization the greater the opportunities. Why should we anglers expect our game to come to us — close by. It can't be done, at least within an hour's drive of Washington.

By this we mean fishing, not just wetting a line on a few small fish when bigger game can be procured by driving another hour.

Look over Out Fishing Guide, published in map form every Friday and watch the tide tables published herein, select your fishing ground and call this writer and get the latest information obtainable on those favorite fishing grounds—double check that proposed trip—all fishing is expensive and it is best to get the most out of it while you can.

"Dear 'Out Fishing:' I thought I had put the old town far behind but when I arrived in St. Thomas, V. I., on April 29 I picked up a paper dated March 14, 1936, and read your column. It seemed for a moment that I was back on the Avenue.

"Being somewhat of an angler myself and this being my first visit here you may be interested in the following experience received yesterday, it should please your light-tackle enthusiast readers. It wasn't done intentionally, although I was after sizable deep sea fish. But it does show what can be done. My rig as you know it, the slender Heddon saltwater steel rod (Pal), the Pflueger Oceanic reel with the special Chesapeake large double handles, and the Ashway No. 9 line. My drifting bait was a half-pound exquisite rosy pink squirrel fish.

"Something big struck and sounded. For 1 hour and 40 minutes I fought it sight unseen. What, or how large, I had no way of knowing. It might be 50 pounds, it might be much larger, probably the latter from its easy refusal at times to budge, and the ease which it repeated it's deep sounding runs. This was in no quick manuvered motor boat, but in a French chacho's dugout sail boat which was then roaring.

My first guess, from information gained here, was tuna, probably influenced by hope. My second guess was shark, though the boatman said, "I believe it is a better fish than shark."

The second guess was right, the battle lasted 2 hours and 40 minutes. Never again shall you call me rough on tackle after holding and bringing along side a 280-pound fighting stubborn mule with your idea of a line(?). That should call for commutation of sentence.

8 More Qualify For 500-Mile Auto Race

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, May 17.—The field of starters for the annual 500-mile automobile race to be run here May 30 was increased to 16 today when eight famous drivers, headed by Wilbur Shaw and "Wild Bill" Cummings, of Indianapolis, qualified their mounts.

Shaw, driving a new, streamlined four-cylinder speedster, was the star performer of the day, rushing around the 2½-mile track for the 25-mile test at an average speed of 117.503 miles per hour. He used just under 2 gallons of gasoline in making the run. The fuel allowance for the time trials is 2.5 gallons.

Ted Horn, Los Angeles; William (Shorty) Cantlon, Detroit; Fred Winnai, Philadelphia; George Barringer, Houston, Tex.; Floyd Roberts, Los Angeles, and Jimmy Snyder, of Chicago, were others who qualified today.

Ralph Hepburn, veteran Los Angeles pilot, who limps from accidents in races of the last 15 years, provided the real thrill of the day when his car got out of control on the turn into the homestretch, it hit the upper wall four times and came to a stop at the bottom of the course. Hepburn was riding alone at the time and was uninjured. His car was badly battered, but he said he hoped to have it ready for the twenty-fourth running of the speed classic.

"Shorty" Cantlon turned in the second fastest 25 miles of the day, with an average speed of 116.912 miles per hour. Horn's average was 116.490 and Winnai's was 116.221.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Like time, the inter-high series marches on today and Western High marches from Thirty-fifth street northwest, to the banks of the Eastern Branch Canal northeast, for a crucial affray with Eastern's inter-high champions. The game was moved up from Tuesday because of the cadet competitive drill tomorrow.

The rather odd spectacle of a Western High team being favored over an Eastern team provides an unusual setting for the occasion. The Georgetowners are unbeaten in two series starts while the champs have dropped two out of three.

Western's record speaks impressively for itself and so does its pitching staff. Coach Cliff Moore has much less to worry about in this department than Coach Charlie Guyon of Eastern.

Lee Kushman, Ted Kinsman and Bob Rafterry are rarin' to go for Western and point to their individual records to justify their confidence. On the other hand, Eastern's pitchers, Wade Pembrooke and Rip Carver, scarcely can point to their past with enthusiasm.

Either Kushman or Kinsman will start today for the Georgetowners with the latter the probable selection. Kushman has borne the inter-high assignment single-handedly thus far, winning both his starts but Kinsman's no-hit, no-run display against Georgetown Prep last week, together with other first-class performances, have indicated he is to be given a chance to share the inter-high work with Kushman.

Eastern's pitching staff is likely to be neither Carver, who lost to Tech and Central, nor Pembrooke, who encountered much difficulty with Roosevelt, but Walter Stockwell or bespectacled Chick Hollidge, the All-High basketball star.

Narragansett Park, May 17.

DEAR AL:

I said that Clocker Mike was hard luck. Clocker Mike said that I was hard luck. So we went out behind the Pimlico stands late yesterday. I took three shots at Mike with a bow and arrow—and missed. Mike took three shots at me with a bow and arrow—and missed. So I hit Mike in the head with the bow. And Mike hit me in the head with the arrow. The bow's broke, the arrow's broke, I'm broke and Mike's broke. I came up to Walter O'Hara's track to try to forget and I sent Mike to Hagerstown. When I arrived this evening everybody I met told me how good the game was up here. However, almost every conversation ended in "lend me a buck." I will let you know in a day or two whether things are what they are cracked up to be. Before letting Pimlico go back to the pigeons and the dust until next fall, I would like to let you in on a fair crack from Mike. The judges kept using the photos despite the fact that in some cases the horses finished half lengths apart. Finally Mike remarked, "When those judges leave here, I guess they'll go over and demand a photo finish of that Italian-Ethiopian War."

BILL.

First race—Capt. Yarbrough seems well placed in the day's opener. He gets in light thanks to the apprentice allowance and I see no reason for mistakes. Boomtown and Gleaming to take care of the others.

Second race—M. J. Brennan and Scotch Queen should battle it out for this purse. Both are fit and I prefer them in the order named despite the shift in weights which favors the mare. Sophist for the show end.

Third race—Payrack draws the good apprentice rider, Leblanc and all he needs is good handling. Mountain Elk appears to be the one to beat. Oneill is a possible surprise.

Fourth race—Happy Knot needs only to run back to his best races to defeat this sort of company. Vote Boy gets in with light weight and is a threat. Hopetodo for the minor award.

Fifth race—Faust, Piccolo and Seabiscuit figure to wage a stiff battle for this purse. I prefer them in the order named. Swamp Angel is a little better than rated hereabouts and could

Warrenton Convict Sought in Capital

Police here were asked to search for Bob Addison, 22-year-old convict who escaped from a Warrenton, Va., prison camp Saturday.

Officials at the prison said Addison, who was serving time for shooting a deputy sheriff, managed to saw through the chain which was fastened to his foot. He eluded armed guards and escaped from the grounds in the darkness.

Bloodhounds were called in from Lorton Reformatory after the break was discovered but the scent was cold. Footprints were found through fields to the road.

An armed posse will scour the woods and highways in the vicinity today. Addison is thought to be on his way to a friend's house in West Virginia.

By the Associated Press.

James V. Martin, pioneer airplane designer and manufacturer, has boosted his total claims against the United States Government to nearly $100,000,000 by filing two new suits in the Court of Claims, alleging infringement of patents by the Army and Navy.

The former Navy officer, who now operates an airplane company on Long Island, N. Y., already had 13 similar suits charging patent infringements by the Government pending before the Court of Claims.

A separate suit was filed by Martin in the Federal Court in New York last week alleging a "corrupt and collusive arrangement" designed to establish an aircraft manufacturing monopoly, and demanding $90,000,000 damages from 69 airplane companies and individuals.

Martin's newest suits ask $7,300,000 compensation for the Army and Navy's alleged unauthorized use of an "aircraft running and alighting device," patented June 17, 1919, and $19,000,000 for alleged unlawful use of an improved "aircraft structure and alighting means," patented May 30, 1922.

His inventions, he asserted, have been used by the two military services of planes manufactured by Curtis, Boeing, Loening, Bristol, Keystone, Sikorsky, Vought, General Aviation, Grummond, Great Lakes, Consolidated, Grumman, Douglas, Northrop, Vultee, Fairchild, and Glenn L. Martin.

Suing under the Sherman anti-trust act in New York, Martin charged that the defendant companies and individuals had "crippled the national defense' by selling the Government "obsolete, unstable, inefficient and unsafe" aircraft and parts: "throttled the advance and development" of the aircraft industry, and "unduly" maintained the price of parts and accessories.

Among the defendants named were a number of the best known aircraft and airways companies in the country.

The Manufacturers Aircraft Association, Inc., one of the defendants, in an answer to Martin's charges, asserted that a similar suit had been dismissed in 1924 in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Forcing Take-Outs To Opening No Trumps.

When your partner has opened the bidding with one no trump and you hold a long major suit, with an unbalanced hand (containing a singleton) it may be better to play for game in the major suit.

With a five card biddable major suit, at least two honor tricks and a singleton, make a forcing take-out (bid one more than necessary) in that suit. Now partner cannot pass until a game is reached.

For instance, over partner's opening one no trump bid, bid three spades on a hand such as:

♠K Q 9 8 6, ♥5, ♦K Q 7 4, ♣J 3 2.

If your suit is a minor, one trick more is needed for game and your hand should contain at least two and one-half honor tricks.

Safety Through Asking Bids.

There is approximately as much profit to be derived from avoiding a tempting, but unmakable slam, thus cashing in a game or, perhaps, rubber, as in reaching a slam that proves a laydown. North and South in today's hand managed to avoid a pitfall through the use of asking bids.

South, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

NORTH
♠A K 8 7 5 4 3
♥6
♦J 10 4

WEST
♠9 6 2
♥Q J 10 3
♦9

EAST
♠None
♥9 8 7 5 4 3
♦8 6 3

SOUTH
♥A K
♦A K Q 7 5 2
♣7 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 diamond	2 clubs	2 spades	3 clubs
4 clubs	Pass	4 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

Before the innovation of asking bids, South would have been in quite a dilemma on his second turn at the bidding. His partner had put in a free bid of two spades. He might well have a good spade suit and either a singleton or the king of clubs. There was no way of discovering his exact club holding.

Under the asking bid system, however, South was able to bid the opponents suit to ask a question, rather than to give a message according to the former meaning of this bid. North, having no club control, was forced to sign off. Had North, in addition to his spade honors, held the ace of clubs, the king, or a singleton, he could have shown such holding by the correct response. In the first case, he would bid four no trump; in the latter two cases he would jump from four clubs to five spades.

Having discovered that there were two losing clubs in each hand, there was no need for South to experiment further and the contract was left at the supersafe level of four spades.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

Government employes fill an important place in the welfare of working men and women, declares Mrs. Berniece B. Heffner, national secretary of the Amreican Federation of Government Employes. She points out that maintenance of fair standards of wages and working conditions in the Government service is reflected in industry everywhere.

BAKER.

"The philosophy," Mrs. Heffner says, "of the labor movement in America is based on the theory that a gain for one is a gain for all; that when one group of workers establishes improved working and living conditions, the way is thereby opened for a similar gain by another group, and ultimately by the whole labor movement.

"Fifty years ago the fight was for an eight-hou day. Most workers have gained that now, although a few still work longer hours. But, if the vanguard had not obtained the eight-hour day, no one would have obtained it; and if now some group does not hold what we have, and strive to better the lot of working men and women everywhere, we shall be back where we were a half century ago."

Dr. L. E. Rackley, formerly of procurement division, Treasury, is now reported to be witn personnel office, Social Security Board.

Dr. Eckener Offers U. S. Dirigible Aid

Chicago, May 17 (AP).—Dr. Hugo Eckener, skipper of the German Zeppelin Hindenburg, offered today to teach American airmen all he knows about dirigibles.

He said he wanted to repay the United States for its co-operation during "the first great pioneering voyages of the Graf Zeppelin."

"I am convinced that world traffic by airships can only be accomplished by international friendly co-operation—or not at all," Dr. Eckener wrote in the current issue of the Journal of Air Law.

Pointing out that "operation of airships definitely demands years of specialized training," the famed navigator of the skies said he would "give these men (of America) every opportunity to share in my experience."

The German veteran of lighter-than-air craft expressed eagerness to give American airship experts the benefits of "my crew's experience in operating Zeppelins near dangerous and foggy coasts and treacherous currents and in areas where hurricanes, pamperos and typhoons are frequent."

Cloudy, Cooler Forecast; Mercury Here Hits 86

An overcast sky is expected to bring to an end today the ideal spring weather which the Capital enjoyed over the week-end.

The United States Weather Bureau last night predicted fresh winds from the southwest will bring a drop in temperature. Clouds are expected to hide the sun. Rain is expected at night.

The temperature yesterday remained in the 80s nearly all day. The maximum was 86. A warm sun in a cloudless sky brought the mercury from the 54-degree low registered early in the morning.

Vacationists in the Capital found the day one of the "most perfect" afforded visitors this season, and large numbers of motorists and hikers visited Washington's parks, the golf courses, and the Zoo.
